SPLIT IN TWO.

The Discord Between Rev. Mr. Maury and His Congregation.

A Vestry Election at Which Fraudulent Ballots Were Very Numerous—Bishop Potter Writes some Strong Letters in Favor of the Smaller Faction—A Congregation in Hot Water.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

GOSHEN, N. Y., June 4.—There is a squabble of long standing in St. James Episcopal Church. The two parties into which the church is divided, appear, at first thought, to be very equally matched. The rector's friends comprise at least two-thirds of the members. A. S. Murray, president of the National Bank of Orange county, Geo. Murray, his son, the vice-president, George Wisner, owner of a large stock farm, W. T. Russell, president of the Goshen Bank, Miss Martha Wisner, a wealthy lady noted for her benevolence, Charles Bachmann, owner of the Bachmann horse farm and stables, the family of the late Mr. Haight, who once owned the St. Nicholas Hotel, in New York, the widow and daughter of Wm. Murray, formerly president of the Goshen Bank, and Henry Bacon, son-in-law of Dr. Brandreth, of New York, are the adherents of the rector Dr. Maury. Speaking with the authority which is given by millions of dollars' worth of property, they say that he shall be protected in his duties as rector.

THE MINORITY PARTY

is headed by Mrs. James F. Matthews, the mother of William J. Matthews, who owns a large property in her own name. Her husband, James F. Matthews, is on the same side, but more conservative. Judge Gedney and his son, Lawyer Herbert Gedney, Mr. J. W. Gott, also a lawyer, and his family and relatives are prominent in the opposition. But this minority evidently believes with good reason that it holds a trump card in the influence of Bishop Potter. The rector's opponents have several letters which the Bishop has written about the rector. These letters, it is claimed by Dr. Maury's friends, are the immediate cause of his trouble, but its source dates back several years. The Rev. W. D. L. Grannis, rector of the church, was in ill-health in 1879. He was a low churchman. Judge Gedney, who is said to have high-church tendencies, prepared certain music for Easter which was rehearsed by the choir, of which Herbert Gedney was a member. Mr. Grannis objected to the music and said it was not fit to be sung in a Protestant Church. The choir divided on the question, and all but two retired. Members of the church took the matter up and the misunderstanding was finally carried into the business and social relations of the members. Families who had been intimate would not speak when they met upon the streets. At last Mr. Grannis went to Havana, Cuba, where he and died within three days. According to one party he was driven from his pulpit by sheer despair at the condition of his church, for which they assert the other party in responsible. The others say he left because of his ill-health which had already so effected his mind that he said and did many things for which he was not responsible. The pulpit was for a time vacant. When the question of securing a new rector came up one faction wanted a clergyman named Rosencrance, from Port Jervis. The Grannis party opposed this choice and settled on Dr. Maury. At this junction an election occurred in the church to fill certain vacancies. The party that should get these officers was likely to get its choice for rector. Forty-eight votes were cast, of which the Grannis candidate received twenty-five. All agree that several fraudulent votes were cast at this election, but each party claims that the other cast the greater number. Impartial persons here agree that it was ever held. One of the men elected was a warden, and he presided at the subsequent meeting of the vestry, when a motion was made to open the pulpit to candidates. Eight votes were cast and the result was a tie. The warden, who had already voted as a vestryman, was entitled to another vote as warden, and he cast it against the motion. A call was sent to Dr. Maury. Two protests setting forth the facts of the election were also sent to him. One was signed by three vestrymen and a warden, the other by members of the congregation. Dr. Maury did not answer them. Judge Gedney wrote to Bishop Potter. The Bishop responded as follows:

December 22, 1881.

DEAR MR. GEDNEY—Many thanks for your very frank and kind note yesterday. It does not at all surprise me. I shall be glad to see the two papers to which you refer. Last spring I exhorted Dr. Maury to have nothing to do with that parish, for I understood what was going on. I foresaw an unwelcome candidate insinuating or forcing himself into a troubled parish. Decision like yours now may save worse struggle hereafter. God grant it.

Yours very faithfully. H. P.

Dr. Maury had been officiating temporarily before the call, and the fact that he continued to do so satisfied that he intended to accept the call. Judge Gedney then forwarded a copy of the protests with a letter, to which the bishop responded:

THE PARTY OPPOSED TO HIM

NEW YORK, December 4, 1881.

MY DEAR MR. GEDNEY—I thank you very much for the papers you sent me, which I retain for the present, as I suppose they are a copy of the communication sent to Dr. Maury. The fact of the pulpit having been so long closed against all supposed candidates for the rectorship is now another proof of the spirit in which things have been conducted by the now nominal rector. It is a sad history, but a state of things which I hope cannot long continue. I earnestly hope that the good people who have resisted this indelicate and improper intrusion will abstain from all rough measures while they quietly and firmly maintain their righteous position.

Affectionately yours,
H. POTTER.

Bishop Potter subsequently wrote a letter to Mrs. Matthews, in which he expressed himself in still stronger terms. The Matthews and Gedney party say they were following the Bishop's advice when they steadfastly refused to acknowledge Dr. Maury as rector, and that the Bishop called him

"THE NOMINAL RECTOR."

For a time some of them continued to attend service, but when the rector advanced to the pulpit to preach they walked down the aisle, saluted the altar after the manner of high churchmen, and walked through the congregation to the door. Judge Gedney, Herbert Gedney, and, subsequently, young Matthews, were of this party. In answer to the charge that they made unnecessary noise, and might have passed out of a side door instead of disturbing the congregation, they say that they went quietly, and did try, on two or three occasions, to pass out of the side door, but found that the other party had locked it. One of Dr. Maury's early sermons was in commemoration of Mr. Grannis. In this the rector spoke of the causes which led to his predecessor's death. It is said to have been a very caustic sermon. In another discourse he took pains to show that Mr. Grannis' enemies were opposing him and quoted in a way which the opposition party saw was very offensive, the text, "I came not to send peace but a sword." Several members of the anti-Maury party withdrew from the church and for some months Judge Gedney and his son have not attended service at all, but have gone to a church in Middletown. Young Matthews continued to attend but always

WALKED OUT BEFORE THE SERMON.

Recently Mrs. Matthews also went to Middletown but left her Sunday school class in charge of her son. On Sunday, May 13, young Matthews, according to Dr. Maury's statement, conspicuously held his book open, while the rector was addressing the school, and immediately after he had requested a student in the same part of the room to close his book.

"Some of the teachers have their books open," the Doctor said.

"Are you referring to me?" young Matthews asked, keeping his book open.

"Boy or teacher, whatever you call yourself; it is you I mean."

"Is that so?" said young Matthews, still keeping his book open.

"If you do not close that book you will not teach this class another Sunday," and the scrimmage occurred, the story of which was told before.

CAUTIONED BY THE CARDINAL.

The Priests Requested to Stay Away from an Irish Meeting.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 4.—A number of Catholic clergymen declined to speak yesterday about the following letter, which is said to have been sent to many of the Irish Catholic clergymen in this city on the day of the Irish National League mass meeting at Cooper Institute:

THE RECTORY FIFTH AVENUE CATHEDRAL, NEW YORK, May 21, 1883.

To Rev. ———:

I am directed by the Cardinal to request that you will not attend the meeting of the Land League this evening. Yours truly,

WILLIAM QUINN, Vicar General.

Vicar General Quinn and Father Fraley, the Cardinal's Secretary, were not accessible. The Rev. John Larkin said that the letter was a "privileged communication," and that he would prefer not to discuss it. Dr. Wm. B. Wallace, one of the Council of Seven of the Irish National League, and chairman of the mass-meeting held in Cooper Union on May 21 to inaugurate the said that he had known for some time that the letter had been sent to the clergymen. He said: "If Vicar-Gen. Quinn, in sending out the letter, thought that at the meeting some hot-headed Irishman might denounce the Pope for his communication to the Bishops of Ireland on the Irish question, I look upon the priests as being wise guides and pure-minded men whose advice is always respected by our people, and their friendly presence and kindly counsel have been antidotes on many accasions to wild and injudicious schemes and projects, and if their superiors should see fit to withdraw them from our present political struggle the cause will lose many able and trustworthy guides. This I would regret very much, but I would have it understood that with the priests or the movement must go on. We are not so stupid as not to see our simple duty in this matter, even if the authorities of the church see fit to interpose their jurisdiction and restrain the priests from participating with us."

"How will this affect your league?"

"It will affect us only as to the membership of the organization, for really all the priests here belong to it. I do not think, however, that any one could order them to abandon a cause that is just, for they must act in accordance with their consciences."

"What do you think caused the letter to be sent?"

"I suspect that it was thought that the

POPE MIGHT BE DENOUNCED

by somebody at that particular meeting. In that instance I don't think that it would have been respectful either to the Pope or to themselves that the priests should have been there. The clergyman who did go, however, had more confidence in their countrymen than the Vicar-General had and the result proved that they were right."

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—South Atlantic States, generally fair weather, easterly to southerly winds, stationary or slight rise in temperature, stationary or lower barometer. Tennessee and the Ohio Valley, slightly warmer, generally fair weather, followed by local rains on Tuesday morning, easterly to southerly winds, stationary or lower pressure. Lake region, light local rains, slightly warmer, partly cloudy weather, winds shifting to southwest and in the west portions lower barometer. Upper Mississippi and the Valleys, increasing cloudiness, followed by rain, variable winds, generally from south to east, lower barometer, stationary or slight rise in temperature. Western Gulf States, increasing cloudiness, local rains, easterly to southerly winds, stationary or slight rise in temperature, stationary or lower barometer. The rivers will remain about stationary.

Curious Attempt at Suicide.

CINCINNATI, June 4.—A young man giving the name of J. Dietz, Reading, Pa., stepped into the money order department of the Post-office to write a money order. He asked to be shown to the private room where he could take a sum of money from his boot. He was told the passage way would do. He drew a small revolver and shot himself twice in the mouth before the pistol was taken from him. His wounds do not appear to be fatal.

Street Car Men on a Strike.

CHICAGO, June 4.—The drivers and conductors of the State Street Cable Railway line to the number of 1,000 quit work at noon to-day, owing to a reduction of wages ordered by the company. A few cars of the State street line are being operated by new men, but the remaining three lines are abandoned.

THE SPEAKERSHIP.

The Chances of Carlisle, Randall and Cox Discussed.

Organization of the Next House as Seen Through Congressman Ryan's Spectacles—Arthur as a Presidential Candidate—Don Cameron and the Stalwart Policy—The Wonderful Growth of Dakota.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—Congressman Ryan, of Kansas, was leaning wearily against the marble desk at the Ebbitt waiting for a friend to come out of the dining-room. The clerk behind the desk had just adjusted his diamond pin and stroked down his mustache for the forty-seventh time that morning, when your correspondent ranged alongside Mr. Ryan and remarked:

"Nice day, Mr. Ryan."

"Yes," was the reply.

"Come from Kansas lately?"

"Yes, a few days ago."

"How are affairs there?"

"Booming," was the sententious reply. "Everybody prosperous and consequently everybody happy."

"Yes?"

"Yes. Crops promise well, extremely well. The indications are that the wheat crop this year will be something enormous."

"What a marked difference, Mr. Ryan, in the condition of the people there now and their condition a few years ago."

"Yes. Most of the farmers, who a few years ago were struggling under a burden of debt, are now well to do, their debts paid, money in bank and their farms valuable."

"Have you seen many of the members of the next House, Mr. Ryan?"

"Yes, quite a good many."

"How do you see the organization prospects?"

"I think Randall will be Speaker."

"Yes?"

"Yes; and John G. Thompson Seargeant at Arms."

"Yes?"

"Yes; and Atkins Clerk."

"Yes?"

"Yes. Randall has the confidence of the conservative element on the tariff question, and that fact will carry him through, I think. You see there is a very strong element in the Democratic party, both North and South, favoring moderation in regard to the tariff. Then, too, the business community is opposed to a disturbance of the tariff at present. Whatever may be their opinion of the tariff law enacted by the last Congress the business community prefers to see it left alone and thoroughly tested before any more tinkering is indulged in. What the business community wants is that the tariff question be given a rest, so to speak, by Congress. And with that view I think the sentiment will be overwhelmingly for Randall. Carlisle is a fine man and an able one, but the conservative element of the Democratic party and the business community generally will not tolerate his free trade sentiments."

"And Cox?"

"Cox! Oh, Cox is as bad as Carlisle in that respect. He is an extreme free trader."

"Why, isn't he claiming to be very conservative on that point?"

"I don't know about that; but if you will look up his speeches you will find that Cox's record shows him to be an extreme free-trader."

"And you think Thompson will be the Sergeant-at-Arms?"

"Yes. He was an efficient and popular officer before, and comes worthy of recognition; and, more than that, he has the votes. That is what tells in the race, you know."

"And Atkins for Clerk?"

"Yes. It will be held that the South is entitled to at least this much, and it of course is; and Atkins is not only a Southern man, but an excellent man for the place beside. He is a man of experience, ability and integrity, and it would be hard to find one better fitted for the place. I hope he will get it, for he would be an honor to the position."

"I see it stated, Mr. Ryan, that Don Cameron will be absent two years from this country and may, therefore, be counted out of politics, so far as 1884 is concerned. Isn't it a fact that the stalwart element of the Republican party is going to take a back seat, for the present, at least, and allow the party dissensions to heal?"

"I think there will be harmony in our ranks in 1884. I am satisfied of that. I think that the breach in New York is rapidly being closed, as is also that in Pennsylvania. I think that 1884 will see the Republican party entirely harmonious and able to elect its presidential candidate without further effort than a good healthy campaign would naturally require. The country is prosperous and the people don't want a change. If they should make one they know that the tariff agitation would begin at once, and the manufacturing interests and those depending thereon would suffer. No, sir, there will be no change in 1884."

"Will Arthur be the candidate of the party, do you think?"

"Mr. Arthur has made an excellent President and stands very high in the estimation of the people of his party and of the country generally—much higher, in fact, than he did when nominated to the Vice-Presidency or when he came to the Presidential chair. He has been President in the full sense of the word, and has so managed the affairs of his office that he has won the esteem not only of all factions of his party, but of all parties."

"Wouldn't he, then, be the strongest man the Republicans could nominate?"

"He has certainly done himself and his party honor in the position," was the careful, but slightly evasive, response.

DAKOTA.

The coming report of the general land office will, it is said, show that more than two-thirds of the sales of lands to actual settlers this spring have been in Dakota. The rush for that country seems to equal that of earlier days when the new West was promising gold to every man who turned his face thither. Wheat, so readily turned to gold, is to be had for the asking from the rich soil of that broad country, and from every direction the people are flocking there. It is stated here that at the present rate most of the available lands there will have been taken up by actual settlers. The wheat crop of that section of country promises to be something wonderful this year. The deep, rich, loose soil, underlaid by a sub-stratum of clay, becomes so thoroughly saturated by the spring rains and snows that it has never been known, but is said to fail in producing a good crop of wheat even though little rain falls during the warmer months. A couple of years more will probably see all these choice lands owned and occupied by thrifty farmers, and others clamoring for the large farms which have already made fortunes for their owners to be cut up into homesteads.

M'COAN AND PARNELL.

LONDON, June 4.—McCoan, the member of Parliament of Wicklow, in a letter to Parnell, informing him of his withdrawal from the Parnellite party, says his reason for severing his connection with the party, besides his offense at the Parnell action in his (McCoan) affair with O'Kelly, is that its aims and methods have long ceased to be those to which he subscribed three years ago. He cannot therefore conscientiously remain in it. McCoan has also written to the Freeman's Journal, Dublin, regarding his withdrawal from the Parnellite party. In it he says the aims of four or five gentlemen who obviously force Parnell's hand have long developed beyond the policy of honest land reform and federal home rule. He says he cannot continue to maintain even nominal relations with veiled communism and rebellion. He asserts there are other men in the party who think as he does, but they are cowed by fear for their seats in the House of Commons, which is hard to understand in honest men. McCoan says he will not shrink from asking the judgment of his constituents on his action.

Two large concerns in Pittsburg, Graff, Bennett & Co., iron manufacturers and furnace men, and Robinson, Rea & Co., are stockholders in the first named corporation. Their solvency is undoubted. All rumors of this kind disregard the fact that their own indebtedness would have to be paid before any claim on score of the Grafton Company could come on them. Both firms are extensive concerns, and have always been managed with most conservative views. Another corporation, the Elba Iron Works, has also been mentioned as being in trouble, but the Associated Press correspondent is informed by undoubted authority that there is no foundation for the same.

CORONER'S CASES.

William Mick Dies at City Hospital This Morning

From Wounds Received at the Hands of Barney McKenna, a Fellow-Waiter—New Cases Reported To-Day for Investigation.

Last Thursday evening a fight occurred at the Metropolitan Restaurant, east side of Fourth, between Pine and Olive streets, which to-day resulted in the death of Wm. Mick. Mick and a man named Barney McKenna had been employed as waiters at the restaurant for several years, and during the supper hour, last Thursday, became involved in the fatal fight. Mary Toole, a pantry girl, was preparing some lettuce for McKenna, when Mick received a similar order from some of his customers. He went back to the pantry and attempted to take the lettuce which was being prepared for McKenna. The girl refused to allow him to take it, offering to prepare some for him if he would get it. The girl reported the fact to McKenna, who approached Mick about it. In the dispute McKenna slapped Mick's face with his open hand and was immediately put upon his defense by the deceased, who ran to a sideboard and began throwing water tumblers at him. The account of the fight as given by McKenna is corroborated by the other witnesses. He was arrested at 1 o'clock and made the following statement without any reserve: "I was employed at that house for four years. Mick, who was called big William, had also been there for a long time. He drank very heavy. It was the custom of the waiters when lettuce was ordered to get it out of the ice box and give it to Mary Toole, a pantry girl, with instructions how to dress it. On last Thursday evening a couple of customers who used to be waited on by Mick, but who gave him up for me came in, and I went to get some lettuce for them. I gave it to Mary Toole, and when I went back she told me that Big William had tried to get it two or three times, but she told him to get some lettuce for himself and she would dress it for him. I went to him and asked him what he wanted to take my lettuce and he said that the girl showed me a great deal of favor and I had better take her down to my——house at the same time he spoke insultingly of my wife and the girl. This angered me and I slapped him with my open hand. He ran to a side-board and threw three glasses at me. As he picked up the other one I ran towards him to catch the glass. We struggled for it and I got my hand cut—you can still see the scar. I was very excited then and struck him on the head with the glass. That evening he went to the City Hospital. I went out there myself yesterday to see him and make it up, but I was a few minutes late and they would not let me in. I had lots of time to escape if I had wanted to, but I did'nt do any more than other man would do in my position."

Capt. Fruchte was informed of Mick's death about noon, and at once sent Officers Ed. Flynn and Lyons for McKenna, who readily returned with them to the Four Courts. The prisoner is a small sized man. His wife runs the McKenna Arsenal Laundry on Fifth street, near Spruce, and rented out furnished rooms. He bears a good reputation.

THE MUNICIPAL MUDDLE.

Who Is to Blame?—An Extra Session—The Motion to Adjourn.

Mr. John N. Straat, in a communication to the Globe-Democrat this morning, makes the point that the adjournment of the Municipal Assembly to-morrow evening until October 12 is simply a recess in the special session, and that it is beyond the Mayor's power to convene the body by proclamation; in other words, he cannot interject one special session into another. The City Counsellor, when questioned about the matter, said that there was nothing whatever in the objection, and instanced the fact that from time immemorial it has been the custom of the Mayors to call the Council together during the vacation to approve bonds and contracts, and there is no reason to believe that Mayor Ewing will act differently.

Public opinion seems to locate the responsibility for the muddle that results in the adjournment of the Assembly, with the appropriation bill and other important measures on the table on the solid seven. The seven councilmen who voted to adjourn until Tuesday next, however, insist that they had every reason to believe that the house would reconsider the June 5th adjournment.

The history of that resolution is as follows: It passed the Council on May 1st, was received by the House on May 8th, and passed on May 11th. On May 15th Mr. Walsh moved to reconsider the vote, by which the House concurred, and this motion was laid over from meeting to meeting until last Friday night, when it was called up, after the House was privately informed of the Council's action. The record of the vote is as follows:

The motion made by Mr. Walsh at a previous meeting to reconsider the vote by which the Council resolution relative to adjournment was concurred in, was taken up and lost by the following vote:

Ayes—Messrs. Brennan, Cornelius, Cossman, Davis, Egan, Gates, Harris, MacManus, Richardson, Terry and Walsh—11.

Noes—Messrs. Alt, Brockmeier, Brueggemann, Dunn, Fox, Gartenbach, Gundlach, Kaiser, Rooke, Schawacker, Schoenbeck, Sullivan, Wagner, Wolfinger and Mr. Speaker Marriott—15.

Absent on Leave—Messrs. McAllister and Slevin—2.

Councilman Ed. Devoy was in the office of the Clerk of the House of Delegates this morning, when the question came up as to who was to blame for the adjournment. The Clerk, with some warmth, said to the Councilman: "It was just a case where the tail did not wag the dog. The seven thought they could dictate to the House and they got left, and that is all there is in it."

Councilman Devoy gave his assurance that he was actuated by no such feeling. He had called over to the House in the evening, and Mr. Walsh and Mr. Brennan had both assured him that the House would not be ready to adjourn on June 5. With the belief and upon the assurance of his associates that the House would reconsider, he had voted for Vastine's motion.

The Clerk then resumed; "You simply overreached yourselves. Now I will tell you what would have been done. If the Council had adjourned until next Tuesday evening we would have then called up the motion to reconsider and have beaten it, because we wouldn't reconsider and amend it, and then send it back to the Council and let you take your time in acting on it, and keep us in session all summer. We knew a trick better than two of that. After refusing to reconsider we would have rescinded the original resolution, and so notified the Council. A new resolution to adjourn on the 18th instant would then have passed and everything would be satisfactory. That is what would have happened if you had adjourned to Tuesday, but when you fellows tried to bulldoze us, we wouldn't have it." The clerk in the use of the word "we," means the House of Delegates, and in "you fellows," the solid seven of the Council.

There was some talk to the effect that the House was anxious to adjourn before the Assembly took any action upon the subject of the coming high license bill, but this is denied by officers and members alike. Should the Mayor not call the attention of the Assembly to the dramshop question in his proclamation for another session, matters will be somewhat complicated next September, when the time for the renewal of licenses rolls around. The Downing bill, as a State law, goes into effect on July 5.

MINISTERIAL MATTERS.

Regular Monday Meetings—Reports from the Churches—Fraternal Relations.

The Methodist ministers were in full attendance on the conference this morning, much refreshed after the enjoyable reunion at Farmington last week. Rev. A. Anderson, Presiding Elder of the Northwestern Swedish Conference of Iowa district, and the Rev. Mr. Vollmer, of the Des Moines Conference, were present. These gentlemen gave glowing accounts of the work in their State, there being a membership of 80,000 in the Iowa District. Encouraging reports were received from all of the city churches. The picnic of Union Church will be given June 12th. The steamer Chouteau has been chartered for the occasion, and a trip of about thirty miles down the river will be taken.

Dr. Mosden delivers the annual address at the commencement exercises of McKendry College, which will be held on the 12th and 13th of June.

The visitors at the Baptist meeting were the Rev. T. J. Morrill, of Virden, Ill., and the Rev. Mr. Lane, of Elleardsville. Good reports were received from the various churches.

There was a very full attendance at the Presbyterian meeting to-day. Rev. Mr. Smith of Pinkneyville, Ills., was a visitor, and Dr. Robt. P. Farris, editor of the Presbyterian, was also present for the first time since the establishment of paternal relations. Rev. Dr. Ganse and Rev. A. Vander Lippe, the commissioner to the General Assembly at Saratoga, were on hand. Dr. Ganse made a few remarks concerning the work of the General Assembly, expressing general satisfaction with it. In the matter of fraternal relations between North aed South, he said they were fully and satisfactorily established. Dr. Farris said that the Lexington Assembly was just as hearty in its desire for fraternal relations as the Saratoga Assembly and that the Southern Presbyterians were glad that they were established. Rev. Mr. Vander Lippe will give his impressions of the assembly at next Monday's meetings.

The situation as to fraternal relations was expressed by one of the ministers as being excellent and firmly established between the two branches of the church. The impression is that organic union at present is impossible, but there is a bright prospect in the future for it, and it is thought that the union of the two churches will avoid the unpleasant friction now constantly experienced. One of the ministers declared that it was bound to come.

A series of special services in preparation for communion on next Sunday will be held every night this week at the North Presbyterian Church. The pastor, Rev. Mr. Williams, will be assisted in the meetings by Dr. Brookes, Dr. Reaser and others.

HOME FOR THE FRIENDLESS.

The Harriman Bequest—Sketch of the Charitable Institution.

The suicide of Charles Harriman, of Plainfield, Ill., late Saturday afternoon, recalls to many old St. Louisans the strange and sad domestic history of this man, who was formerly a well-known resident of this city. His death by his own hand was the fate which many had predicted for him, and the only surprise expressed by those who knew him was that he delayed so long. Harriman, when very young, came into possession of an immense fortune and at that time he was a liberal and very popular young fellow, well known in different parts of Missouri. He was married to a young lady who was at the time a belle in Sedalia, Mo., the daughter of an old and highly respected citizen. The young couple took up their residence in St. Louis, and soon had a host of friends. Everything prospered with Harriman. His financial ventures all turned out well, and he was generally looked upon as being as happy and successful as any man could wish to be. Then family troubles came on. Harriman grew jealous of a young man named Knott, and claimed that the latter had won his wife's affections away from him. He would hear no denials, although the wife protested her innocence, and finally he moved from St. Louis to Plainfield, a small town eight miles from Joliet, Ill. The object of this change of location was, he said, to take his wife away from the influence of Knott. At Pianfield. Harrman invested most of his money in real estate, and he came to be looked upon as the richest man in the county. No persuasion could induce him to change his opinion about his wife's infidelity, and he continually brooded over it and he tormented the unfortunate woman in every way he could. At times he had terrible spells of anger, during which he beat his wife most unmercifully. This cruel treatment was well known to the neighbors, several of whom endeavored to persuade her to seek a legal separation. Mrs. Harriman would not hear of this, however. One morning her body was found hanging to the rafters of the barn in the rear of the residence. Harriman himself carried it into the house, and, as he gazed at it, exclaimed with apparent satisfaction: "He cannot harm you now." Since his wife's death he has been almost a recluse. On Saturday afternoon he drove down to the village, made a deposit at the bank and started to go back. Then he stopped, muttered something, drew a pistol, and shot himself through the heart, falling dead out of his buggy. By his will he left all his money to the Home of the Friendless in St. Louis and in Chicago.

Deceased was a very wealthy man and the institutions mentioned will receive handsome sums if the suicide's estate is shared between them. The Home of the Friendless, in St. Louis, is located on the Carondelet road, south of Meramec street. It had its origin in the circumstance of the death, at the county poor-house, of a lady who had fallen from wealth and refinement to abject poverty. Thereupon, Mrs. Joseph Charless undertook to establish a retreat for aged people. She obtained from her husband a nucleus of $500, and from Henry D. Bacon a subscription of $1,000, to be paid when she had raised $10,000. She did secure subscriptions amounting to $13,000, and the Home was organized on February 3, 1853. The charter designates, as the corporators, all such persons of the female sex as heretofore have, or hereafter may, become contributors of pecuniary aid to said institution. As the managers are required to be corporators, men are excluded from all active participation in the management. The charter authorized the city of St. Louis to give the Home $30,000 in land or bonds and the county to give it $20,000 in bonds. The County Court gave the amount so authorized, and was purchased for $18,000. Two years ago an addition of twenty rooms was made to the institution. The Home now contains sixty-four rooms for inmates and the grounds are seven acres in extent. The rules provide that no one under fifty years of age shall become an inmate, except such as are disabled; that all shall pay an admission fee of $100, and shall further covenant to reimburse the Home in case they acquire property. Since its establishment the institution has furnished shelter to over 600 old ladies. There are now sixty-two inmates. Its total income last year was $10,227.

The Marriage Record.

The following marriage licenses were granted this morning: Herman Friedlein and Emilie Wendel; John Huerlimann and Mary Suter; Anton Hoeffner and Rosa Froebel; Louis A. Kedrey and Laura B. Server; James A. Walker and Maggie Meagher; John F. Baker and Sarah C. Steel; Lawrence J. Lattier and Mary C. Brooks; Thomas F. O'Neill and Alice C. Monahan; John W. Maresh and Katie Larginayer.

The Masonic Hall.

The Masonic Hall property was sold to-day by the trustee for the first mortgage of $75,000 in default of payment of the first interest note. The property was bid in by the holders of the mortgage, the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company. The purchasers of the property from M. A. Rosenblatt had placed a second mortgage of $35,000.

New Buildings.

Mr. Hiram Nance is building two adjacent brick dwelling houses on the west side of Webster avenue, between Cass avenue and Dickson street, the estimated cost of which is $5,000.

The brick store and dwelling house which Mr. John Kabel is building on the north side of Cass avenue, between Elliott and Clay avenues, is estimated to cost $3,600.

CAMILLE'S VICTIM.

How a German Physician's Life Was Ruined by an Artful Woman.

Washington Cor. of Cleveland Herald.

That portion of the city situated immediately south of Pennsylvania avenue, west of Tenth street, and east of Fifteenth street is known in police and similar circles as "Hooker's Division," and a certain sub-section is more specifically and graphically designated "Murder Bay." This entire "division" is occupied by the demi-monde of Washington, being to a certain extent their traditional dwelling-places, where their business and that of still more degraded saloon-keepers is carried on undisturbed, and, to a certain extent, in an orderly way. The attention of the police is little turned to these places, the policy of the department being to limit houses of ill-fame to this neighborhood rather than entirely eradicate these fever sores of moral disease. It is not necessary to describe these women, as they differ in no particular from the brazen, degraded, and unfortunate women of the town of other cities. They are, however, no Camilles. The writer is only brought to speak of them at all by an incident which was lately brought to his notice by an officer of the police force.

In 1865 there came into Cincinnati a young German doctor, with a small supply of money, an excellent stock of German philosophy, a fine physique and a thorough university training. In connection with a Frenchman of pronounced convivial tastes and gold-mounted eye-glasses, he opened an office on lower Vine street, and was soon in fair practice, riding in a neat carriage and boasting an office boy, who, by the way, is now an army surgeon. The German, as is so often the case with professional men of his country, was a younger son of a good family, who had left his country to improve a fortune which could boast little more than the nameless wealth of a name. During the third year of their practice the French partner, being much addicted to spirituous liquors, was one day unable to get out of the way of a very spirited pair of horses, driven to a carriage, and was run over by them, taken to a hospital and died. The German, whom I might as well call Dr. Joseph, as the name sounds well and is neither his by birth or adoption, was much downcast by this untimely death, cut off his supply of beer increased his business activity, and fell more in love with his profession, as being to him the only friend left. He became quite well known as an occasional contributor to medical information and surgery, and collected one of the finest medical libraries in Cincinnati.

Early in December of 1871, he was surprised, and it is to be supposed rejoiced, by the death of an uncle in Germany, whom he had never seen but once, but who, in strict accordance with the course of the irregulation pughacious distant relative, insisted upon leaving the nephew all his money. This sum, when exchange and lawyers were paid, amounted to about $65,000. The doctor's office was closed in one month, the neat carriage was for sale, and the natty office boy was for hire. Dr. Joseph had determined to devote his German existence to German philosophy and original reseach in medical science.

But Dr. Joseph's $65,000 looked very large to him, and his student life was soon too humdrum to occupy all his waking hours. His eld longing for dissipation returned. He began frexuenting resorts of a somewhat notorious and not at all doubtful character, and the $65,000 began to be reduced at about the rate of $300 per month. In one of these German summer gardens, then, as now, a popular Cincinnati institution, in the summer of 1872, he met Mina Rebhan, a showy-looking woman of the town. Mina, for that is her real name, although she has been known by several cognomens, was not long in learning the easy circumstances in which our physician was situated, and very little slower in playing him into her own hands. The woman was loud and vulgar, but her shrewdness covered a multitude of faults. In a few months Dr. Joseph and his newly-found enemy were living together without the formality of a marriage, in a semi-respectable street in Covington. The Joseph house moved along peacefully. The female portion soon became an admired figure in theaters, on drives, and at masque balls. She gambled a little; drank heavily. Dr. Joseph began to abandon his researches in science, often, indeed being compelled to do so in order to find his recreant mistress, who was often in the hands of the police for disorderly conduct.

To make a brief story briefer, in May, 1875, there remained of the $60,000 only $800. Dr. Joseph considered the case philosophically, calmly; sold the furniture, returned to Cincinnati, installed his mistress in more modest quarters and hung out his M. D. sign again. But in four years he had lost his cunning. Riding through all weather to a poorer set of patients than of old did not agree with his health. His energy had gone. His protracted sprees grew more frequent and protracted. Mina called for money in vain. Her clothes followed her jewelry into the pawn-shop. One night after a visit to her Jewish friend of the "money-loaned-on-clothing" proclivities, she calmly told her physician that she could have nothing more to do with him. Dr. Joseph considered the matter philosophically, calmly, and consented. Mina went back to her old companions in sin, and took up a residence in the lower part of the city.

She prospered as wicked people do. Dr. Joseph, still pursuing his profession spasmodically, fell lower than ever. Having at last, at the conclusion of a long spree, sold all his office furniture and his extra clothing, and spent all the money, experimented with the charcoal mode of exit from this world's stage without being successful. Being arrested by the indignant guardians of the peace for this outrage upon the decorum of good society, he wrote to Mina, from the city jail, that he desired money enough to pay his fine. The woman sent it to him, clothed him, and gave him enough to keep him until he should get sober. But he could not resume practice in Cincinnati. He was too well known.

Mina's eyes having for some time been fixed upon Washington as a place to ply her shameless trade, she proposed to her sister, another member of the demi-monde, to come to Washington. The proposition was submitted to the doctor, with the suggestion that he accompany them and open a physician's office here. He accepted it with his never-to-be lost equanimity, and the trio thus entered this city. The women soon rented a house in the Division and furnished it in the most gaudy fashion: but the doctor was not as prompt. Washington was not to his liking. He was in the pride of his life, but his energies were those of a man of 90. Mina then proposed that he live at her house. He consented and selected for himself a back attic room.

He never practiced medicine again, but in the back room he slowly went back to his books. He read much and broadly of a great variety of literature. During congressional sessions he was a frequenter of the galleries, well dressed, dignified and thoughtful. He had no companions. He made occasional trips to neighboring cities, generally returning very nevous and trembling and drunken. Mina's new victims never knew of the old victim's existence. Indeed, even of the many women who, at one time or another, have been inmates of her house, only a few ever saw him, and many never knew of him at all. During one year he never spoke to Mina, only sending to her occasionally for money by the servant.

One day last week the servant went to his room with his breakfast and was unable to wake him. The door was forced open, and on drawing aside the curtains of the window the sunlight fell upon his dead face, cold, quiet, philosophical, as of old. A physician was quickly summoned, but knowing little and caring less, and being in haste to reach a scientific gathering, he hastily pronounced a cause of death in good Latin, and he hastily rode away, leaving the policeman in a state of confused ignorance and awe. Dr. Joseph was buried on Sunday in Baltimore. There were two mourners, Mina and her sister. The room in which the man died was pleasant, well furnished, and scattered about were books and scraps of manuscript in a lean German hand. On the bed by his side, open, was found a copy of Walter Besant's late novel: "Let Nothing You Dismay." Let nothing you dismay, God is just!

The policeman who told me this story remarked in conclusion, with an indescribable admiration: "You bet your life, she is the squarest woman that ever put foot in Division; she never shook him." So I suppose the Division will croak its chorus. A square woman! Heaven help us, she only ruined his whole life—nothing more.

The Kitchen Goddess.

By Bob Burdette.

Say you are a well-to-do tradesman or mechanic, you can afford to employ a servant to make life easier for your wife. Well, that servant lives alone. Your wife and yourself discourage "followers." You don't like her to have too much company of either sex in the kitchen. Your wife cannot associate with her. The kitchen is her sitting-room, the smallest and most remote room in the house is her bed-room. From 6 a. m. until 9 p. m., or earlier and later, may be, are her hours of work. In all that time she speaks when she is spoken to, and she is spoken to when there are orders for her, just as convicts are allowed to speak in a penitentiary. Well, now the lonely creature in the kitchen is a woman. Do you wonder she wants to go to the jolly butcher and the grocer's boy for a little gossip? Do you wonder that she flirts with the policeman? Do you wonder that when she goes to the ball she stays until sometime the next day? She sit down three times a day and eats her meals in solitude, so utterly alone that she can hear herself swallow. I wonder that she doesn't go mad. The man who works at the lowest occupation has an easier time than that. The man who cleans the street has company of his own class. He eats his dinner with his fellow-laborers. The rag-picker meets rival rag-pickers every day. I don't wonder the house servant stipulates for company and evenings out.

The Markets.

FORENOON SESSION.

There must have been a marked improvement in the condition of wheat since last week. Several fine samples of wheat were shown on the floor and a good many encouraging reports came in from sections where last weak the prospects were said to be very discouraging. The cause for this change is attributed both to the favorable weather and to the decline in the market.——The grain pit on change has been enlarged by splicing and now accommodates a larger crowd without the discomfort of the former restricted space.——Toledo's stocks this morning were 1,103,971 bu wheat, 585,133 bu corn and 56,124 bu oats, a decrease for the week of 67,000 bu wheat and an increase of 45,000 bu corn and 10,000 bu oats.——The stock of lard at the six principal continental ports on June 1, 1883, was 16,000 tcs, against 19,000 tcs May 1, 1883, and 37,000 tcs June 1, 1882. Consumption is light.——John T. Milliken writes from Cincinnati very discouragingly regarding the wheat crop of Indiana. Parties who have traveled over the State inform him the crop is 50 per cent of an average crop and 40 per cent of last years'. The condition is daily growing worse and if the Hessian fly did any further damage the Indiana crop would be an entire failure. A great many fields have been plowed up and what is left is not worth cutting. An Indianapolis miller, whom he met, said he did not know where he could get wheat to run his mill, unless he bought in St. Louis. This miller is paying within 2c of New York prices for Mediterranean wheat in Indianapolis. Illinois and Indiana parties are heavily long in Chicago, talk two dollar wheat and a 325,000,000 crop. Corn is very backward; not hardly out of the ground, when farmers say it ought to be at least knee high in June.

A communication from some party in Carroll county, Mo., published in this morning's Republican, says they are getting wheat at 90c to $1 in that country. A gentleman on the floor to-day from Poaches Prairie, in Chariton county, just across the river from Carroll county, states that he will pay $1 for all the old No. 2 wheat this Carroll county man can buy, and, furthermore, will pay him a commission on all his purchases. The name of this gentleman can be obtained by addressing the Culver Commission Co.——A. E. Babcock wires from Chicago to Oswald Graves that telegrams from Hastings, Minn., report chinch bugs thick in wheat.——New York stocks this morning were 3,738,073 bu wheat, 447,116 bu corn, 683,050 oats and 126,035 bu rye. This is an increase of 710,000 bu in wheat, 16,000 bu in oats, and 43,000 bu in rye and a decrease of 51,000 bu in corn.——Milwaukee's stock of wheat has increased 155,000 bus to 1,627,977 bus and corn 10,000 to 19,615 bus.——R. S. McCormick & Co., received this message from a New York firm: "Are 2c above Liverpool and if we decline that much Liverpool would do the same. Trouble is they don't want liberal supplies of wheat, owing to large stocks over there."——A. E. Babcock telegraphed the POST-DISPATCH commercial reporter to-day: "Reavis justified at last. St. Louis takes the lead. Mississippi Valley wheat going up; Chicago down."——McGeogh took the Fowler lard to-day under protest. It is thought in Chicago the lard trouble has been compromised.

The expected decline in wheat futures took place to-day, but was not near as great, nor during most of the time was the weakness as pronounced as some thought it would be. Fine, bright weather, more encouraging reports from the crop, a dull and heavy Liverpool, and weak and lower markets elsewhere in this country, is-what depressed prices, but the declines in Chicago and the East exerted most effect, the local market following their changes pretty closely. There was a pretty steady demand here, and any encouragement held out to operators by reactions at other points at once started them to buying, while a decline usually had the effect of checking trading. This continued until after the noon call, when such universally depressing reports came in from other points that prices broke rapidly and at the close were extremely weak and 1½@1⅝c below last Saturday. Corn futures were weak and declining on unfavorable advices from other markets, though Liverpool was firm, with corn to arrive 6@9d higher. Receipts were large in Chicago and fair here, but most of this Chicago corn were through shipments. The tone was very weak all through and at the close declines were established of 1@1¼c from Saturday's close. Oats were quiet and ¼@⅝c lower. Cash wheat was firm, as its supply was scarce, but No. 2 red sold ⅝c lower, most of it selling to one party. Corn declined and was slower sale, the demand being rather small and showing no pressure. Oats were lower, but sold readily.

Flour—Receipts 6,001 brls. The market to-day was very quiet, buyers exhibiting but little disposition to trade at the prices ruling, which still continue at quotations published below. Provisions—Receipts 50 brls pork, 1,322,500 lbs meats, 41,500 lbs lard, 49,290 lbs grease. There was hardly a market to-day, so extremely dull was it, there being little demand and the tenor of outside advices generally discouraging. Standard mess pork sold at $19 50 and extra heavy at $19 60. For prime steam lard 10¾ was the best bid. Sellers still quoted loose dry salt at 8 for shoulders, 10.10 for longs, 10.20 for c'ribs, 10.40 for shorts, but nothing was done. Bacon shoulders sold loose at 8.45, longs packed at 10¾ and shorts packed at 11¼, besides some loose country shorts at 10½; for country hams there is no demand now, as fears are felt of their condition, but shoulders could be sold at 8¼. Cotton.

A very quiet market was had to-day. Locally and otherwise spots presented no features of interest. There was no change in values and the movement at all prominent markets was dull and sales light. An easier tone was reported at this market, but there was no quotable change. Futures started out well, but the advance which was had during the day was not sustained. At New York prices were partly a point up at the early opening, advanced another point on a special call, but at 2:30 p. m., was 2 to 4 points lower than the opening figures. The market was generally dull, and but little trading was done. Liverpool opened steady and unchanged, and closed quiet at 1-64d. up for September and December. Like New York, New Orleans was dull, opening at a partial advance, but soon fell off again and showed indications of a decline before the close. New York at the close was dull and easy at a decline of 1 to 3 points all round.

CATTLE—The arrivals this morning were quiet large, and with those received the day before made up a supply of over 100 car loads of all kinds. Buyers were on hand early, and it being the day for local dealers and butchers to supply themselves, a good trade was had in butchers' cattle from the start up to a late hour in the morning. Prices were apparently unchanged and salesmen had no trouble in obtaining the same rates as were current at the close of last week. Eastern buyers were not present in very large force, it being rather soon for them, but the few on hand were looking around, and from the character of the offerings salesmen were hopeful and disposed to anticipate a good movement before the day was over.

HOGS—With the exception of a small trade with butchers, the market this morning was about as bad as it could well be. Butchers commenced purchasing early, and were through long before noon. Sales to them were at an extreme range from $6 75@7 10 for light to good heavy weights, bulk of sales were below 7c, and in some cases it was found necessary to split nickles in order to consummate sales. Besides the transactions a few pigs changed for fresh meat purposes for which $6 00@6 40 was paid. Shippers although present were not doing anything. A few of them looked around and one offer of $6 65 was made for lights, but up to a late hour there was nothing done. The tendency of the market was bearish in the extreme and a decline is looked for by all. Quotations were nominal at last Friday's figures. No sales having been made it is impossible to say what the figures will be later in the day.

The Missouri at Kansas City is rising.

The War Eagle should be in to-day from Keokuk.

The Calhoun is the packet for Peoria, leaving Wednesday.

The Ste. Genevieve returns to Grand Tower to-morrow afternoon.

The Montana had an excursion party from Kansas City to Leavenworth and return yesterday.

A Government quarantine boat is on the docks. It will be completed and let into the water this week.

There was considerable activity at the barge line wharf this morning, the cargo of the R. S. Hayes tow being discharged.

The new St. Paul boat will be completed June 20, and will then be named. It has been decided not to call her the "Key City."

At the St. Louis Sectional Docks the Colorado is out of the water, having some caulking done. She will be off on Wednesday.

The Montana left Kansas City, Sunday, with 100 tons, and the telegram received by Jenkins & Sass says she will fill out below.

The waters of the Missouri River are being upheaved by the Fannie Lewis and the Bright Light, opposition boats, coming down "neck and neck."

The Centennial will be dropped down to the Davidson yards this afternoon to receive a cleaning up preparatory to leaving for St. Paul, which will be in a few weeks.

The City of Providence, from Vicksburg, made better time this trip than she has made this season, making the round trip in fifteen days. She returns to-morrow afternoon.

Com. John A. Scudder, ex-president of the two Anchor Lines, leaves St. Louis, on the 9th inst., for New York, where he will remain a few days making preparations for his ocean trip.

Capt. Isaac P. Lusk, agent of the Diamond Jo Line, received a telegram this morning saying the Libbie Conger would arrive some time during the afternoon. She returns to-morrow afternoon and will be followed on Thursday by the Pittsburg.

The Ironsides, from Cairo, left two of her barges below here and brought one to this port. She had a burnt boiler, which will be repaired by midnight to-night, when she will return for the remainder of her tow.

The transfer boat Bogy has been pulled out on the ways and is being overhauled. There are also on the ways being constructed ten rock barges for the Government, to be completed by July 1. The Bogy will be ready for business day after to-morrow.

Capt. Thomas P. Morse, secretary and general manager of the St. Louis Sectional Docks, closed a contract this morning with the Government for another quarter boat, to be 78 feet long, 16 feet wide and 3 feet deep, to be completed next Saturday. This will require dome rushing work.

The D. R. Powell, from the Ouachita River, got in this morning with 5,500 sacks of cotton-seed and a lot of wool and hides. She goes to the Missouri on Saturday in the Kansas City Packet Company. She will have company in the Bright Light, of the Electric Line, both leaving on Saturday. These steamers are first class, and are warm competitors.

One of the barges of the R. S. Hayes tow, which arrived here yesterday morning from New Orleans, contained an odd cargo. It consisted of fine cattle from the Isle of Jersey for R. R. Foster of this city. The ocean vessel Consular left the Isle for New Orleans with sixty head of this stock, but during a storm all but nine head were washed overboard. What are left consist of six heifers, one bull and two bull calves, and they are all formed to perfection. After the Government quarantine laws are complied with, they will be removed to Mr. Foster's farm on Union avenue.

MONDAY, JUNE 4, 1883.

WHO is there to mourn for LOGAN? Nobody.

FRANCE evidently believes in treating Annam with a great deal of annamosity.

THE result of two months of patriotic labor on the part of the municipal assembly —nothing.

WILL we get a street railroad out to Forest Park this season? Not this season, some other season.

As usual, when the City Council passed the adjournment resolution they "didn't know it was loaded."

THE Solid Seven are more anxious to explain the depravity of the House of Delegates than to explain their own proceedings.

IF the Seven of the City Council are in an explaining mood we should like to have them explain what is the basis of their union.

THE Globe-Democrat will please rise up and defend the record of the coalition in the Council which it supported, if indeed it did not lick it into shape.

ALL candidates whose names are presented before the next Democratic convention will be required to furnish the proper certificate, signed by the family physician.

THE announcement that HENDRICKS is willing to accept the second place on the TILDEN ticket would indicate that HENDRICK'S had received a pointer about TILDEN'S health.

THE Republican this morning quotes a statement that the circulation of the Courier-Journal is 16,400. The circulation of the Republican is, like the algebraic x, an unknown quantity.

NEW YORK has already opened its free municipal swimming baths, but in St. Louis the season has not yet justified such summer amusements. The indications are that St. Louis will be a pleasant summer resort.

So glad the "grand old ticket" has been nominated. We did think at one time that Democracy was not altogether unanimous for TILDEN, but now that he has been nominated we infer that we must have been mistaken.

NOW that HENDRICKS has nominated TILDEN for the first place on the National ticket, the least that TILDEN can do is to return the compliment and give HENDRICKS the first place. We like to see great men polite even about trifles.

HERE is the election a year and a half away and yet the Postmaster-General is obliged to warn the postmasters not to leave their business to attend to politics. If these things are done in the green leaf, what must we expect when the campaign comes around?

NEXT week we are all going to the races, and between the heats we will have time to study the history of racing and the pedigrees of the horses. It is an essential feature of racing management that the public should be amused by waiting thirty-five minutes for a spectacle which lasts one minute and thirty-seven seconds or thereabouts.

THE ex-Congressmen are making themselves useful nowadays. Ex-Congressman DEZENDORF is exposing the iniquities of the Norfolk Navy Yard. Ex-Congressman MURCH is showing up the supervising architect business, and Ex-Congressman CROWLEY is working up little schemes to be exposed hereafter.

THE authorities of Berkshire county, Massachusetts, have stopped the running of Sunday trains, and now if the outside heathen gets caught within the limits of the State on Saturday night, he is obliged to stay over, nilly-willy, with the chances, of course, in favor of his being converted before he escapes. Sometimes this kind of legislation makes people right moral and sometimes it don't.

MURCH says that one granite contractor in putting up public buildings made a fraudulent profit of $418,000 out of a contract for which he was paid $818,000, and that without this fraud his profit would have been fifty per cent. In other words the Government paid $818,000 for work which cost the contractor $260,000. It is safe to say that the contractor is one of the pillars of the grand old party.

WE always read the Sunday Republican to improve our French, and when we read of a Fourth street house having "a magnificent Chinese portier, three hundred years old," we are amazed at the longevity of Chinese porters, especially those who come from Yokohama, and when we read of a lady crying out "Je suis maladie," we wonder which malady she is. To cull an expression from the repertory of Bardwell Slote, wouldn't it be safer to "wrestle with the vernacular?"

STRANGE windfalls are mentioned in the Missouri papers since the recent cyclones. A note given for real estate at Excelsior Springs, Clay county, was found in a Livingston county cornfield, a hundred miles away. The future novelist of the West will find our tornado literature rich in materials for startling situations and thrilling denouements. But although well attested facts frequently surpass the wildest invention of the cyclone liar, a very commonplace explanation sometimes spoils a wonderful story. The calf which was supposed to be a waif from some distant county, dropped into BUFFUM'S lumber yard at Louisiana from the baggage car of some bounding tornado, is now said to have tumbled from an overhanging bluff whereon it had been grazing.

A LAME DEFENCE.

The solid seven who have made themselves amenable to public censure by wasting the whole two months of the special session of the Municipal Assembly have made a lame and clumsy attempt to defend their precipitate adjournment by saying that they "expected the other house to reconsider the concurrent resolution of adjournment to October."

This is a most remarkable defence. The Council itself did not reconsider the concurrent resolution, and it has no fault to find with itself for its failure to do this; but it does find fault with the House for doing exactly what it did itself, and says that if any bad results are experienced the people must blame the House but must praise the Council.

This is indeed remarkable. It is a piece of childishness such as we do not remember in the annals of municipal legislation in this city. We have occasionally had corrupt legislation, and have frequently had incompetent legislation, but the spectacle presented by the majority of the City Council in adjourning to October with the appropriation bill not yet before them, and then saying they were not responsible, is a piece of childishness insulting to the common sense of the people whose interests are thus trifled with.

MACHINE LABOR.

A miner who writes to us from Collinsville on the situation in the coal regions says, among other things:

But is it not true that labor-saving machines are killing labor in this country? Is it not time that Congress should put a heavy revenue tax on all such machines so as to give labor that has no machine a chance for competition? What will become of our laborers and our country after a while?

This is a common fallacy which crops out among people who have better chances of philosophising than are granted to working miners. The only answer to it is to controvert the theory by the evidence of fact, and the evidence is now abundant.

One of the most conspicuous instances of this fallacy was in the case of the sewing machine. It was insisted that the sewing machine would inevitably starve the sewing girl, but what are the facts? There are more sewing machines employed now than there were sewing girls employed before the machine was invented; all sewing that the machine can do is greatly cheapened and the people dress better, but there are quite as many women employed at hand sewing and their wages are quite as good. The sewing machine has marvelously increased the world's comfort and welfare, added to the general stock of its wealth and resources, enabled the world to clothe itself better for the same outlay, and has not injured the laborers who were threatened with the loss of their livelihood.

The same rule applies to coal machines, to reaping machines, to the use of steam, to every appliance that lessens the cost of production. All of these improvements improve the condition of the workmen, both by enlarging the field of employment and by enabling the employé to get more for his wages. There is no possibility of legislating against them, nor would it be desirable if it could be done. They are the workman's best friend.

EUROPE AND AMERICA.

It is ascertained that Europe's population has increased 150,000,000 in the last half century, and is increasing now at the rate of 4,000,000, besides sending abroad 1,000,000 emigrants yearly. This growth has so far out-run food production that Russia and Hungary are now the only European countries that count on raising all of their own food supply. Forty years ago Great Britain alone looked beyond her own soil for breadstuffs and provisions. Now the utmost resources of the soil are taxed in vain to feed the population of Europe after Russia and Hungary are left out of the calculation. In 1850 the total value of our exported food products was less than $27,000,000. In 1880 it was sixteen times as much, or nearly $440,000,000. Cattle on the remotest ranges of Texas and Idaho now command better prices than they brought on the cultivated farms of the old Atlantic States in 1850. Wonderful as our increase in population and production has been, it has not more than kept pace with the growth of Europe's demand for all the surplus we can produce. Indeed the increase of our disposable surplus is becoming more and more a subject of constant anxiety to the people of Europe, their only assurance against impending famine. European statesmen know that their dependence on us in this respect will become more and more absolute in spite of the greatly increased emigration to the United States. They see no solution of the trouble ahead of them but in food-producing colonies of their own. They are exploring the world for conveniently accessible and fertile sites. France and England, Italy and Spain are concocting plans for the colonization of all the available lands of Africa. Until those plans are carried out successfully in the far future, Europe can no more afford to court or welcome a war with us than a city can afford to declare war against the country upon which it is dependent for trade and food. No other country on earth is protected like ours from foreign assault by the whole outside world's interest in our welfare. We can for generations continue to receive immigrants and to increase our population and production without the least danger of overdoing either or of weakening the relative security and happiness of our position.

PREVIOUS NOMINATIONS.

Just at present there are a great many statesmen who have a great deal of leisure on their hands, and for lack of more serious occupation they employ themselves with the harmless and inexpensive amusement of nominating other statesmen for the Presidency. In this way a great many of our leading men have been nominated without the expensive process of a convention, and the public have had an opportunity of voting in their mind's eye, as it were, on their favorite candidates.

There is only one objection to this little amusement, and that is that it is a little bit previous. It will be fully a year before the conventions are held, and so great are the chances and vicissitudes of a year that almost any man who is nominated now is certain to fall of securing a nomination in a year from now. The nominations made this year are very much like the first eggs laid by young hens, they will not hatch. Next year's nominations mean business, and thus the attempt to train a team too long in advance of the race might really defeat the kindly object of putting them in early training.

A year is a very long time in politics, and its cycle hath its dangers for all. Just at present the season is remarkably healthy, particularly for Presidential statesmen. Those who, six months ago, were resisting the encroachments of senile gangrene in the toe, are now pushing the lawn-mower over the daisies with a firm and elastic tread, and some who have felt the palsied touch of time now vault on horseback with the airy grace of young HOTSPUR, and, with occasional intervals of somnolence, keep an eye on the current of public events.

But the winter is a stormy time and full of dangers. Serious epidemics have broken out about the time of an election for Speaker, and have carried off most promising candidates. A debate on the tariff is debilitating in the extreme, and a session of Congress may wither the blossoms of the brightest hopes. Let us not rashly expose ourselves to the grief and disappointment of bringing up a favorite son, only to be shocked by his untimely death. Let us spare his feelings and our own, and not make our nominations at a time when such a tribute of admiration may be a lethal gift.

WHILE the alleged newspapers of Cincinnati and elsewhere are faking up SPURGEON'S sermons as cable news, the Globe-Democrat, by combining with the Philadelphia Times, manages to give us an admirable cable letter every Sunday morning, fresh, newsy and accurate as far as it goes, but not complete. For instance, in its account of the prize-fight near the Elephant and Castle in the Borough road, between Lord CHARLIE BERESFORD and MACE, it mentions the presence of the Prince of Wales and other members of the social aristocracy, but it omits to mention the losses incurred by GLADSTONE in rashly betting on MACE with the Archbishop of Canterbury, who backed the fighting BERESFORD, nor does it mention the enthusiasm with which the Earl of Shaftesbury lightens his evangelical labors by attending the fascinating squared circle. Prize-fighting has always been the English national game, and the recent revival of it under the auspices of JOHN RUSKIN, THOMAS HUGHES, MATTHEW ARNOLD and other muscular Christians, has made it the recreation not merely of the social aristocracy but of the Universities and of the Church.

THE fancy of the Republican organ-grinder lightly turns to thoughts of TILDEN and HENDRICKS. As a campaign joke on the Democrats it will have its little run, of course. But the Democratic party, rejuvenated by a large accession of the fresh young blood of the last decade, will make its own nomination this time. Both TILDEN and HENDRICKS declined a renomination in 1880, and they cannot gracefully seek or accept it now. A pair of childless old men in feeble health, they are worthy of veneration for what they have done and what they have been, but like many other eminent men in the past they can serve their party best by not being its nominees. Moreover, no nominee for President from New York has reached the White House since VAN BUREN was elected in 1836, and now, more than ever before, are experienced politicians united in the belief that the next President-elect, like all who have been inaugurated since 1836, will be a Western man.

SOME people in this country sympathize with GLADSTONE'S crusade against the "unspeakable Turk," and were pleased with the idea of placing the amiable Christians of Bulgaria under the gentle dominion of Russia. Prince ALEXANDER of Germany now rules there with a Russian Prime Minister, and American missionaries find that the Mohammedans were less cruel, while they were not more bigoted and intolerant than the Greek church. American schools, which had not been interfered with by the Turks for twenty years, have been suppressed. Americans have been flogged by mobs, and their houses have been broken open by the order of the magistrates. The notion that the humanity of any country will be elevated under Russian auspices, or that freedom and fair play can flourish anywhere under Russian rule, is what the late WILLIAM ALLEN would call "a barren ideality."

WE are accustomed to look on Iowa as a State which had a right to go up to the front seats in the synagogue and pray a little bit louder than any of her envious competitors would be justified in doing. The steady Republican majorities in Iowa and the passage of a prohibition law point that State out to the world as one in which the very highest moral tone is maintained, and yet the honest farmers of Iowa seem to be as ferocious and desperate in their lynching scrapes as if they lived in the wicked South. Their most recent exploit was the lynching at Winterset of a man against whom the only evidence was the declaration of a convicted felon who was in all probability the real murderer.

THE NEW YORK PRESS.

Current Editorial Comment of the Metropolitan Journals.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 4.—The World to-day says: "True Democracy means a reform that will prevent the abuses of patronage, make both the Executive and Congress better than mere marts for office brokers, clothe a Government position with dignity and honor and fill every public department with gentlemen of character and capacity in place of broken-down Republican politicians, incapables, idlers and so many men of blackened reputations and unsavory records. But reform should begin at home. The greatest drawback to civil service reform is the reformers. No doubt many of the loudest professional reformers are attitudinizing and insincere. Men like Dorman B. Eaton are insufferable bores. Men like Rutherford B. Hayes are intolerable frauds. The first reform needed by civil service reformers themselves is to get rid of some of their offensive standard-bearers."

THE HERALD.

The Herald says: "It is said that the Senate being Republican, nothing can actually be done toward tariff reform at the coming session. The true Democratic policy is to produce their programme boldly and decisively at the next session, to fix the attention of the country upon it, to make clear the necessity and the merits of tariff reform, and, if the Republicans oppose and defeat it, that will only the more positively make it the issue. But to succeed, it needs the fullest and the most constant discussion before the people."

THE TIMES.

The Times says: "A Republican party denouncing the cotton manufacturers of New England as opposed to protection, and a Democratic paper warning the South against them as Free Traders, are signs of the times which we commend to those eager statesmen who imagine that the Republican party has perfectly plain sailing in the matter of the tariff."

THE TRIBUNE,

The Tribune says: "The Ohio Republicans seem to have adopted the right method, and with the earnest work and thorough organization that will follow the convention, the promise of their success is bright indeed."

PERSONAL POINTS.

—It is not Don Cameron, but a Mr. Cameron, of New York, who has been knighted by Queen Victoria.

—Louise Michel has just sent to M. Lisbonne, the lessee of the Bouffes-du-Nord, a manuscript play which she has written in prison.

—M. de Lesseps is telling his friends that he expects to have another christening in his family. It will be the tenth affair of the kind.

—Governor McDaniel, of Georgia, goes to his home in Monroe county every Saturday night and returns to the capital for duty on Monday.

—A manuscript of St. Patrick, in Latin, has been discovered in the Royal Library at Brussels. It formerly belonged to an Irish monastery at Wurzburg.

—Mrs. Southworth, the writer, having competed a ten-years' engagement with Mr. Bonner's story paper, has made another ten-years' contract with the same publisher.

—Theodore Tilton's once fair brown locks now hang over his shoulders in ragged tangles of gray, his eyes look heavy and jaded, and there are deep wrinkles all over his face.

—It was said of the Prince of Wales recently, by an Australian, that he never makes any one remember his high rank, although somehow he contrives not to let any one forget it.

—M. Kossuth, who has spent the last thirty-three years of his life in exile, was the recipient of addresses from 100 Hungarian counties and boroughs on the recent occasion of his eightieth birthday.

—Gen. Miles, whose wife is Gen. Sherman's niece, has bought the old "Stone mansion" on the Hights just outside the city limits of Washington. Their first son was born to them last winter, who is twelve years younger than their eldest child, a daughter.

—James Smith, a wealthy merchant of Glasgow, Scotland, has come all the way to America to attend a meeting of the Southern Historical Society at Nashville. His interest in the history of the rebellion is due mainly to the fact that his brother Colonel Smith, fell while leading a Mississippi regiment at the battle of Munfordsville.

—The bicycle convention in New York has called attention to the fact that the tailors favor the reintroduction of knee breeches. "It's bound to come," said one tailor; "I tell you the long-legged trouser business has had its day;" they will bag at the knees, he says, and not one man in ten has a foot on which trousers will fall and bend gracefully.

—Capt. Delaney, of the Ninth Massachusetts militia, says no company in the State can compare in drill with the crack companies of the South, and he regards the trip to Nashville worth all it cost, because "every member has received a vast amount of instruction in points which go to make up a superior military company."

—German newspapers report that the Shah of Persia has become a raving maniac, and the question of his successor is being seriously discussed. His oldest son, Prince Selil, is an able and popular man, but is disbarred from the succession by the fact that he is the son of a peasant woman. The legitimate heir, who is now Minister of War and Governor of Teheran, is, on the contrary, incapable and unpopular.

A Beastly Practice.

ST. LOUIS, June 3, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Is there no city ordinance to punish the beastly practice of perching on the rear platform of a street car and spitting out into the street? I have had two narrow escapes from this filthy baptism in three days and should like to hear of an offender being sent to the rock-pile. I.

Etiquette in Huntsville.

HUNTSVILLE, June 2, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

We want to know why is it that when the distinguished people of Huntsville go abroad they ride in cars and are bussed with colored people and never kick, but here the depot is three-quarters of a mile from the main street and the colored traveler has to foot it rain or shine?

The Closing Hour.

ST. LOUIS, June 4, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The boundless stride which the POST-DISPATCH has made in taking in the entire East and West has met with much admiration from its many friends, who are largely represented among the dry goods salesmen of this city. And now, that the summer days are upon us, it is to be hoped that the POST-DISPATCH will use its persuasive eloquence in behalf of the employes of the retail dry goods houses, to have them close business at six o'clock p. m. every day, instead of remaining open till seven, and Saturdays until nine o'clock p. m. The ball has been put in motion by several leading houses to close at three o'clock every Saturday, but we would be thankful to cease labor at six o'clock every day. All good people should favor the move, and especially the ladies, for nearly all of them have either a husband, father, brother, sister, sweetheart or friend engaged in the dry goods business. Now let the POST-DISPATCH smile upon us, and give the boom a characteristic push, and all will be well with your friends,

THE NINE O'CLOCK P. M. SALESMEN.

Blondes Going Out.

From the London Court Journal.

There is to be an entirely new style of beauty. The girls with the ruddy locks or the golden hair and the Saxon skin, that have held their sway so long, will have to abdicate their throne to their dark haired sisters. So fashion has decreed, and when fashion does decree a thing the result is as unalterable as a general election. To be in the fashion to-day you must have dark hair, dark blue eyes, not a particle of color and lips as the cherry. These rather varied requirements are to be met—with art.

Academic.

From the Kansas City Times.

Journalism in St. Louis is now agitated over the question of authority for saying "there was more than one cyclone" or "there were more than one cyclone." As soon, as the grammatical problem has been solved, we trust the editorial gentlemen will favor us with their authority for using the word "cyclone" in direct defiance of the Kansas City Academy of Science.

A Lesson for the Times.

From the Kansas City Times.

The New York Times playfully alludes to the World as "our St. Louis contemporary." For all that the St. Louis contemporary appears to be giving the Times a few hints in modern journalism, which are worthy more serious consideration than a fifth-column humorous editorial.

A Sensible View of It.

From the Boston Post.

Wendell Phillips says of the custom of conferring degrees upon our Governors: "If the custom is a bad one, let it be changed at some future time. But not now, when every man will see that it is only the impotent attempt of a defeated faction to insult a successful rival."

Costly Headgear.

From the Chicago Times.

It is estimated that the crowning of the Czar cost $10,000,000—a fact which the woman who wants a new bonnet will not let her husband forget.

Collars.

From the Philadelphia Times.

The new Czar has given a diamond collar to his prime minister. The rank and file will continue to wear iron collars as heretofore.

THE WIDOW WACKERLE.

The Louisiana Court Judgment Considered Fatal to Her Case.

Judge Horner rendered a decision to-day sustaining the demurrer in the case of the Widow Wackerle against the Ætna Life Insurance Company and J. C. Webster. The plaintiff is the lady who figured in the sensational suit before the United States Court, recovering at the hands of a jury a verdict and judgment for upwards of $6,000 against the Mutual Life Insurance Company, of New York. The company, it will be remembered, took an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States and the point of dispute was the death of the husband. A person was produced by the company in court who claimed to be the husband of Mrs. Wackerle in the flesh, but she denied it and repudiated him. It was a question of identity, and the jury, on the evidence, established the conviction that the man produced was a younger brother of Wackerle. Judge Horner thus disposes of the demurrer set up in the case before the Circuit Court: "Mrs. Wackerle held a policy of insurance issued by the Ætna Company upon the life of her husband. He was killed in an accident on the railroad near Shreveport, La., and Mrs. Wackerle commenced a suit in the District Court of Louisiana to recover the value of the policy. She alleged that the company and the agent, Webster, conspiring to defraud and cheat her, did procure some person, who was an imposter, to falsely swear in the court that he was her husband, William Wackerle, and by such testimony a judgment was procured against her, and consequently her rights under the policy were wholly lost. The company answering to the $10,000 suit in Judge Horner's court, contended that inasmuch as the matters contained therein had been adjudicated in the Court of Louisiana and determined adversely to plaintiff, she is estopped from proving her case here. It is apparent that the Louisiana case and this case, says Judge Horner, had its pivotal point in the death of Wm. Wackerle, for if he was living when the plaintiff instituted suit she has no cause of action and she can claim no damages from the company by reason of any act, whether the result of a conspiracy or otherwise by which the court was induced to render a proper judgment, so that the question as to the death of Wackerle must have been before the court. The judgment of the court of Louisiana is conclusive against the plaintiff, not only as to her cause of action on the policy, but as to any fact in issue and determined by the trial and judgment. A judgment cannot be attacked collaterally by the parties thereto even for fraud. Mrs. Wackerle is bound by the finding of the Louisiana court that the party produced was William Wackerle and that the company therefore did not procure the judgment by false testimony. It would be an unwarrantable evasion or destruction of well-settled rules of law to permit a party to a final judgment to question the truth of facts determined adversely in another suit. The demurrer is sustained."

THE PROBATE COURT.

Judge Wœrner sat in the Probate Court to-day opening the June term. Several decisions were rendered in cases taken under advisement. In the matter of Isaac S. Coe, claimant, against the estate of F. N. Burge the court refuses to adjudicate either upon the claims or counter-claims, leaving the parties to seek their remedy in a court of competent jurisdiction. In the matter of the partnership estate of Conney, Hoeschuk and Rushebeck, exceptions to final settlement of surviving partner, the court finds a balance of $1,983 37, for which the surviving partner is liable. In the matter of the estate of Anton Mueller, motion for the executrix, the widow, to give bond, the court overrules it. While the arrangement entered into between the executrix and her brother is a technical violation of the rule in equity, which forbids an executrix under any circumstance to purchase at her own sale, there is no necessity to require bond on that account.

KNOTS SEVERED.

Judge Thayer to-day granted the following decrees of divorce in cases taken under advisement: Mary Peyton against Frank C. Peyton, decree granted plaintiff; Enos D. Usner against Helen M. Usner, decree for plaintiff with custody of children; Elzina Fiquet against W. F. Fiquet, decree for plaintiff.

MR. W. C. STEIGERS, of the POST-DISPATCH, will call upon parties who wish rates for advertising in this paper.

THE LOUNGER.

When I see Judge Cady walk down the aisle of the Court of Criminal Correction, and take his place at the bar, I feel sorry that with his good intentions, and his desire to do what was right, he has not succeeded in accumulating more of the world's good things. I have no intention of claiming for him any eminent ability, for I believe that Charlie himself would be the first man to deny that he was thoroughly versed in Constitutional law, or other obstruse branches of his profession. Neither would he desire to say that he had not sometimes made mistakes during his life. What is remarkable about him, however, is his kindly sympathy, the readiness with which he can put himself in the place of the prisoner brought before him and distinguish the unfortunate from the undeserving. Cady knows what it is to be in hard luck himself, and he is a firm believer in the golden rule. A wife-beater is about the only man who would appeal to him in vain. For that class of people he has no use, as a judge, and it is said that after a peculiarly aggravating case of this kind he has been known to adjourn court in a hurry, to get a chance to express himself as a private citizen, in language which would not be permissable on the bench of the three C's court. As a preacher he was a success, and many a young fellow remembers the time when Cady called him up beside him on the bench, lectured him most severely, and, with a countenance as stern as if it were of cast iron, and when the culprit thought that a life sentence was the least he could look for, dismissed him with an advice to be more careful in the future.

MR. WM. CONNER, who opens the St. James Hotel in New York, knows Cady well, and can testify to the above facts. "Billy," as his friends call him, is now the successful manager of John McCullough, has owned Glidelia, Black Gal and other good horses, and is in every way as prosperous and as popular as he deserves to be. He was born and raised in St. Louis where his mother and his brother still live. Billy was always a bright boy, never bad, but occasionally a little wild. One morning, when he was not more than sixteen years old, he found himself a prisoner, coming up before Cady, in the Police Court. There had been a disturbance at the old Empire saloon the night before. Billy, who was a plucky youngster had interfered in favor of the weaker man, and a big policeman had distinguished himself by doing the well known act of rushing in when the trouble was over and "collaring" Conner, who was the youngest and the least war-like looking of the group. Cady knew the boy well and when his eye lit upon him, he called him up. "What are you doing here, you scamp?" said he, with the usual assumption of sternness. "Little trouble down at the empire," said the boy, "but I'm not to blame." "Of course not," said the Judge. "Go sit down, I'll attend to you, never fear." Cady called the prosecuting attorney, pointed to Billy, who was sitting by the wall, and a whispered conversation took place, to the evident terror of the prisoner, who thought his doom was sealed. What Judge Cady was really saying, however, was: "I know that boy over by the wall there. He is a good little chap, and I want to turn him out. Will you enter a nol pros in his case. You need not call it out." When court was over the Judge called up Connor, informed him that he was a young rascal, told him to go, and that, if he ever caught him there again, he would take him into the back room and spank him well before he put him on trial. "But I never spanked him," said the Judge, as he told the story, "because I never found him there again."

CADY himself told me a story which illustrates pretty clearly that he was always willing to do to others as he would wish others to do to him. On one St. Patrick's day, when Dan. Rollins was chief of police, he and Cady formed a supplementary procession of their own and marched over a route which was nearly as long and four times as tortuous as that taken by the big parade, and when night came on, the Police Justice and the Police Chief were feeling somewhat like the boy who did not care whether school kept or not. In the course of the conversation, Rollins remarked. "I say, Cady, we are two nice fellows to try and punish men to-morrow, for drinking to-day, are we not?" "Right you are," answered Cady, "the same idea was running through my own head just now." "What can we do about it?"

"Let's turn some of 'em out," said the Chief. "Done," said the police judge, and the two started for the old lock-up. They got to the place about 10 p. m. Old Billy Lawler, the jailer of the detectives and a veteran in police service, was the calaboose keeper at the time. "How many have you got here, Billy?" said Cady. "Och, sure the place is full to the very doors." "What have they been doing?" "Drinking, of course, nothing else. Some of 'em are drunker nor others, but all of 'em have been tastin' the potheen too often." "Bring them out and put them in a line," said Rollins. Uncle Billy looked surprised, but did as he was told. When the revellers were arrayed in line, the first man was asked whether he would rather be kicked out now, or stand his chance of a trial in the morning. He took the former. The chief and the police justice booted him to the door, and he ran up the street. The same process was applied to all the drunks. Next morning the docket was extremely light, the smallest that ever followed a St. Patrick's day. Howe was Mayor at the time. He sent for Cady, and wanted to know why it was there were so few cases. "Why," said Cady, "we shortened it by trying a lot of them last night. The Chief and I came to the conclusion that it was not a big offence for an Irishman to drink a little on St. Patrick's Day nor an American on the Fourth of July," and he told Mayor Howe the balance of the story. The Mayor laughed, and nothing more was ever said about the matter.

NORTH ST. LOUIS.

Last month the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company sent out 7,000,000 feet of lumber, valued at over $100,000.

The colored church house, West Eight eenth and Montgomery streets, is to be sold at auction June 16.

Mr. Wm. C. Clemson, city lumber measurer, has returned from West Virginia, where he sold his farm.

The revival at the Fourth Christian Church closed on Tuesday night, and the remaining converts were baptized at the Central Christian Church this afternoon.

Dr. Ed. Borck, the well-known surgeon, leaves to-night for Cleveland, O., to attend the annual session of the American Medical Association, which begins to-morrow.

Bernhardt Wastman, 1702 Farrar street, fell down last night and struck his head against a stone-step, cutting a severe gash on the left side of his head. The wound is not dangerous.

The trustees of the Fourth Cristian Church have their eye on a lot on the corner of Sixteenth street and Newhouse avenue as an available site for the erection of a house. The Protestants in the Eighth ward are said to be anxious to assist in the enterprise.

THE BACKWARD SEASON.

How Trade and Business Have Been Affected by the Cold Spell.

A prominent photographer was walking down Olive street this morning, when a reporter accosted him with a "how's business?"

"Business is bad. The late spring has done it all."

"In what way? Have the ladies delayed making up their spring and summer attire, and consequently postponed the semi-annual sitting?"

"No, it is not that. It is a lack of money in circulation, and the cold spring is responsible for it. Look around you and see how many men are still wearing their winter clothing. Ask the first ten men you meet, and nine of them will admit that they are still encased in their flannels. Where are the straw hats? Where are the light spring suits, the low-quartered shoes, the striped socks. Only yesterday I saw ladies on the street wearing circulars or dolmans, and, three mornings last week business men came down town wearing their winter overcoats, and felt the need of them on their return in the evening. I went to the circus on Saturday night, June 2. Ordinarily every lady present would be clad in some light lawn, or other thin, cool goods, but a glance around showed the dark colors of winter, the high, tight-fitting cloth basques, and escorts carried wraps upon their arms the same as in March or April. Now this means that so long as there is no spring weather people will not buy late spring goods. They hold on to the early spring cloth goods and wraps as necessary for comfort during the past month, as during the preceding. No one can believe that the strange weather will last, and, anticipating summer—real genuine St. Louis summer—they do not buy spring goods for a week's wear or so. Consequently there is not the money in circulation usual for this time of the year. Should the summer come right now, and come to stay, why the retailers of dry goods, clothing, furnishing goods, hats, etc., will find themselves with heavy spring stocks on hand, and that means a loss to the dealer."

Straightway the reporter walked into a hat store, and to the well-known proprietor said: "How has the backward spring affected your business?"

"It has increased the sale of light stiff hats of pearl color, but it has put the straw hat business at a standstill. Ordinarily the boom in straw hats sets in early in May. I don't suppose that during last month, when compared with other years, that the sale of straw hats reached ten per cent."

"But if real warm weather was to set in now, would it not even up the straw hat business?"

"Hardly, for you see that most gentlemen who desire to dress well wear from two to three straw hats during the season. The first installment has practically been passed. A continuance of this cool weather would really be the best thing for our business, as it would keep up the demand for light felt and stiff hats."

A LEADING CLOTHIER

said: "While our business for the past two months has been nearly double what it was during the same time a year ago, that does not go to show that this has been a very backward season. Many young men of limited means have been able to wear their winter clothes until now. It is true that if the summer would set in fairly right now that this class of persons would buy a light summer suit, and thus escape the expense of the spring suit. To show however, that it is an ill wind that blows nobody good, the trade in light spring overcoats has been heavier than ever before."

A call was then made upon the head of one of

THE LARGEST DRY GOODS HOUSES.

He said: "I do not think the situation is serious. As a matter of fact, the season has been most propitious for the sale of heavy spring goods. Ladies are not like men in this particular; they buy closer to the almanac. The trade in ladies' clothes, etc., has been very good. Where the falling off is in the diffidence of the ladies to lay in the usual stock of summer goods until they become satisfied that there will be a summer. Trade in that branch is really very dull. Some good, solid St. Louis summer weather would, however, create a demand for the muslins, lawns, etc., that would equalize matters."

A CUSTOM TAILOR,

on Olive street, said: "We have felt the effect of the cold spring more than any other class of business men, except the ice men. Many of my customers are wearing their winter clothing. I am making up plenty of summer suits, but I know of a dozen regular customers of mine who have omitted from their wardrobes this year the customary medium weight spring suit."

A FURNISHING GOODS DEALER,

under one of the prominent hotels, said: "Trade is almost at a stand-still with us. Nineteen out of twenty men are still wearing their flannel and woolen underclothing. We always carry in stock a line of medium weight merino goods, half way between the flannels and the summer gauzes. The advent of summer will, of course, create the usual demand for the gauzes. Flannels will be doffed and the others put on, and the spring outfit will be left on our shelves until next season. The sale of fancy hosiery, owing to the few low shoes worn thus far, and the business in summer neckwear has also suffered." Casual interviews with a shoe dealer, the proprietor of the largest beer garden, a gentleman interested in the Sunday concerts at the Fair Grounds, several retailers of soda water and others, gave further evidence of the far reaching effects of the "cold spell." In the language of the country paper, "it is to be hoped" that the beautiful weather of to-day is the commencement of a real summer, not too summery, but just summery enough.

A DAYS' DOINGS.

How the Sabbath is Spent by the Lower Classes.

One Hundred and Nine Persons Arrested by the Police Yesterday for Disturbance of the Public Peace and Drunkenness on the Streets—Arraigned in the Police Courts.

A sad procession of fifty unfortunates wended its way from the Central District holdover to the dock of the First District Police Court this morning. Judge Jecko and City Attorney Clover gazed at a docket of ninety-six offenders and braced themselves for a big day's work. In territory north of Washington avenue the hoodlum wagons made great efforts to establish their worth. Every fifteen minutes they were seen tearing out of the station houses and wildly galloping through the district after some case of "dead drunk" that would have waited twenty-four hours in the same position. This morning, the Black Maria carted several loads to the Second District Court. In the docks a group of prisoners stood about each basin dressing cut heads, cooling fevered brows and reducing swollen blackened eyes to a level to permit their owners to get a glimpse of the surroundings. More blood was seen in court to-day than usual. Bloody shirts and dresses were numerous, telling the tale of the bloody encounters of the Sabbath.

Alex Wells and Martha Johnson were the first couple arraigned. Alex keeps a restaurant in the alley between Sixth and Seventh and Spruce and Clark avenue. Last night Martha called there and ordered coffee for one. Alex has but a small corps of waiters, and business was rushing, that is, there were three persons in the house at one time. Concerning the subsequent misunderstanding the caterer and the customer gave vastly different sworn accounts. As the lady's was accepted by the court it was probably the more truthful presentation of the case. "I went into the restaurant last night and ordered a cup of coffee. Alex. don't have no bills of fare 'cause he can't write and a good many of the customers can't read. Well, I sit down and waited. I fooled wid de salt box—Alex. keept his salt in a box. Well, I waited. I wasn't in much of a hurry, but I lost patience at last. He kept fooling and monkeying about some stylish, half-fed niggers dat wanted spare-ribs in June time, and I had to wait. Well, I waited. I'll tell you, Judge, yer Honor, dat nigger could a cooked a horse for me durin' dat time. I got tired waitin' and I started out. Alex came out from behind de screen and fired a cup at me. He caught me right on de poll and I had to go to de Dispensary. He fired a saucer at me, but I dodged an' he missed me dat time. Den I 'scaped." Alex told a very different story. He said she ordered, and before he could turn around three times she was tearing around in a tantrum. "I know'd she was a cutter," said he, "an' when I saw her a kind o' steerin' over toward the knife box I determined to defend myself, an' I shied a couple of cups at her. De officers came in and grabbed me." The profits of Pontins Pilate alley cafe for the next two weeks were knocked into a cocked hat by the assessment of a fine of $23 50 against the proprietor.

Maggie Shaughnessy made the monotonous programme of drinks and disturbance interesting for a few moments. She was charged with being drunk on the street and pleaded guilty. The judge assessed a fine of costs and as he was passing sentence she interrupted him with a prepared speech beginning "Yer Honor" and continuing as below with an increasing high pitch, and the interruptions given."

Clerk Bischoff—"Step back"

"Somebody stole my shawl."

Deputy Slevin and Clerk Bischoff—"Step back!"

"Or I never get drunk."

Judge Jecko, Slevin and Bishoff—"Step back, madam! step back!"

"It's three weeks since I—"

Judge, Clerk Slevin, Bischoff and Deputy Siegmund, in concer—"Step back! step back! step back!"

As Maggie was hustled into the dock during a brief intermission in the echoes "step back" she was heard to say in a pleading voice: "And I'll never get drunk anymore." The slamming of the dock door cut her off from a tittering audience.

Yesterday a total of 109 arrests were made in this city, eighty-one of which were made between Cass and Chouteau avenues. The arrests made in the police districts were as follows: First, 2; second, 13; third, 37; fourth, 4; fifth, 9; central, 44; total, 109.

ST. CHARLES NOTES.

Checking the Big Muddy—Lindenwood Commencement Exercises—Base Ball.

The Government engineers in charge of the harbor improvement work at St. Charles have ceased work on account of lack of funds and the employes have been discharged. Several hundred feet of willow matting, heavily anchored with rocks, have been laid on the banks below the foot of the bluffs above Brotherton Bend, which will probably be destroyed by the next rise of the river. The Wabash Railroad Company has a large force of men engaged in placing matting in the bend for the protection of the track and approaches to the bridge. The river is within a hundred yards of the track at several points and is making rapid inroads into the soft banks. The company, however, expect to check the current before it reaches the track.

The commencement exercises of Lindenwood College opened on Friday evening with a contest for the musical prize. The young ladies competing showed excellent progress and proficiency in their studies. The judges were Prof. Macks, Rev. Mr. Schaefer and Mrs. A. Miller, of St. Charles, and the prize will be awarded Wednesday. Saturday afternoon and evening a large number of friends of the institution attended the exhibition of the art class, which has been under the charge of Miss Allen for the past year. The work of the year shows excellent results and much earnest work on the part of the instructor and her pupils. A committee of judges from St. Louis will examine the work to-day and award the art prize. Yesterday morning in the Jefferson Street Presbyterian Church, President Irwin preached an eloquent Baccalaureate sermon. The vocal class, assisted by the vocal teacher, Mrs. Mattie Hardy, rendered some beautiful sacred selections. To-night a musical concert, vocal and instrumental, will be given at the church, and to-morrow night the annual address will be delivered by Rev. C. L. Thompson, D. D., of Kansas City; on Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock the graduating exercises will be held.

The commencement exercises of the St. Charles College will take place on Thursday, June 7, and on Thursday evening a concert will be given by the pupils under the supervision of Mrs. J. B. Brannock.

The Æsthetic Base Ball Club, of St. Charles, defeated the Florissant Club yesterday by a score of 15 to 14.

A Well-Deserved Compliment.

The passengers who reached New York by the Anchor Line steamship, City of Rome, unanimously joined in preparing and signing the following address, which was presented to Captain Munro:

S. S. CITY OF ROME, June 1, 1883.

R. D. Munro, Esq., Commander:

DEAR SIR—At the termination of our voyage, we, the undersigned, saloon passengers, desire to approach you to express our admiration of the professional skill you have displayed in navigating the ship for days through dense fog and other hidden dangers, and our appreciation of the undeviating kindness, attention and courtesy we have received from yourself and every officer and servant on board.

Of the noble ship herself we need say but little. She stands forward as perhaps the finest specimen of Marine Architecture of her class in the world. For comfort, elegance, steadiness in the seaway, strength of hull and equipment and sea-going qualities generally, she is unrivalled.

In bidding you adieu it is with every kind wish for your future health, prosperity and happiness, and in the hope and belief that, under more fortunate circumstances than those of the present voyage, this fine ship may develop to the fullest extent that fleetness she has given us proof of possessing. We are, dear sir, yours very truly: Jas. G. Ross, Quebec, chairman; N. P. French, New Orleans; Hermann Schuarz, New York; Ed. W. Scripps, Henry Zoe, New York; W. E. Chambers, Lt. Col. Br. Staff; S. T. Linklater, M. B. C. M., Scotland; Jane Maguire, Cork, Ireland; Alex. Maguire, Cork, Ireland; Samuel F. Barnett, Alabama; Frank W. Barnett, Alabama; Adam Morrison, Glasgow; Wm. Baim, Laub; A. J Beach, Ocean Grove, and about sixty others.

The Projectile to the Moon

Didn't quite succeed in effecting a lodgment among the extinct volcanoes of the glorious orb of night. But things have happened equally improbable; for instance, a year or two ago one house in St. Louis had a complete monopoly on the celebrated Star shirt waists, and the prices on these much-used boys' garments were up among the clouds, from $1 50 to $2 50 being the figures. But live competition, as usual in such cases, made the prices tumble; and the first instalment, sold by a St. Louis house outside of the monopoly institution, was placed on the market by Famous, the wide-awake outfitters. It is a little singular; but the manufacturers refused to sell their goods to any concern but the "monopoly," and they came to St. Louis by way of Cuba—and in due course of time reached Famous. The result was a tremendous fall in prices right away, and the St. Louis people who purchase anything now in our line, at reasonable prices under a monopolist figure, owe the happy result to Famous competition.

PTUCKED PATENTS.

Adverse Decisions of the Federal Court in Notable Cases.

This was a bad day for patents and patentees in the Federal Court. Judge Treat rendered decisions in a number of cases including the barbed wire patent controversy. The court holds that the reissued Kelly and Glidden patents are void and therefore refused to grant the preliminary injunction asked by the Washburn & Moen Manufacturing Company and Issac L. Elwood. The Washburn Company likewise sought an injunction against Gustav Griesche and Henry Fuchs relative to the manufacture of patent machines for barbed wire. This injunction was refused on the ground that there was no infringement.

In the case of A. J. Manny against George R. Oyler and others, relative to the Sherman & Pfeil patents for frame and yoke combination, etc., in plow construction, the court discovers nothing patentable in the Pfeil patents and no infringement of the Sherman patents. There is accordingly a decree dismissing the bill with costs.

The motion for a new trial in the case of Manville vs. Karst is overruled. If after notice of the plaintiff's claim the defendant chose by the aid of a friend through confession of judgment to pay the amount of his liability as a stockholder to a third person, whereby a fraud is necessarily worked on the original plaintiff there is no reason why such a transaction should be upheld. Double liability of stockholders might easily be evaded and the general creditors left remediless.

The court decided the Widow Madeira's case against the Merchants' Exchange Mutual Benevolent Society in favor of the defendant. The forfeiture of the policy was complete before the death of the insured by nonpayment of mortuary assessments.

EAST ST. LOUIS.

James McGarrigan and John Neidemeir were each tried by 'Squire Lynn for disturbing the peace and fined $3 and costs each.

George Bier was jailed last evening for disturbing the peace and resisting a police officer, but was let off this morning on payment of costs.

John Dillon, George Bishop, Peter Tracy and Thomas Garvey were arrested last evening on charges of being drunk and disorderly, and each assessed $3 and costs this morning.

John Gaines was arrested on charges preferred by Herman Jenger, and stubbornly resisted arrest. Jenger now refuses to prosecute, but charges of disturbing the peace and resisting officers in the discharge of their duty were preferred by the officers.

A crowd of about two hundred men, women and children were entertained over an hour last evening by an encounter between two bull dogs owned by Mike Cleary and Patrick Dean, both employes of the Transfer Company. The fight took place near the Transfer stables on the island, Dean's dog being victorious.

St. Patrick's and St. Henry's Catholic churches were both entered by burglars last night, but the booty secured did not compensate for the labor lost. An entrance to St. Patrick's was effected by prying open a shutter and raising the window. Several locks were broken and the poor-box rifled, but little or nothing secured. A small quantity of wine represents the loss in both churches. Burned matches are scattered all over the churches, and a portion of the floor in St. Patrick's was slightly burned. Father O'Halloran is of the opinion that the burglars were young men out on a drunk, and only desired to appropriate the contents of the poor-box.

The Press and the New and Great South-west.

The States of the South, acting after the manner of the great railroads, have opened a bureau of information as to their resources and attractions, in New York and London and other European cities. The bureau will have samples of the agricultural and manufacturing interests of the South and West for free exhibition, and for the information of intending emigrants.

The press of the South and West owe it to themselves to note the growth of their respective centers, and the special excellence of its manufactured products. This is a duty which the press fulfills all over the world, and one of the highest missions and services to the people. The supremacy of the West in agricultural machinery is now conceded all over the world, and the CHARTER OAK STOVE WORKS has pushed St. Louis to the front in this industry; but this superiority is attended with other good results—the best skill will in the future locate itself there and act indirectly on the neighboring States in supplying them with skilled labor and building up other industries. This was the plan the Western States adopted in building up their respective agricultural and manufacturing interests.

Typographical Union.

CINCINNATI, O., June 4.—The thirty-first annual meeting of the International Typographical Union of the United States and Canada began here this morning. No business was transacted. The afternoon will be spent in trips to points of interest about the city.

RAILROADS.

Report of the Executive Committee of the Freight Bureau.

Imports and Exports at New Orleans for May—Called Line Meetings—Personals—Notes—Gossip.

Capt. Clubb, of the East St. Louis Connecting Railway, is laying a third rail on his road to give the T., C. & St. L. and St. L. & C. a connection with each other.

Abe Flansberg, general trveling passenger agent of all the lines interested in north and northwest has returned from a thirty-one days' tour of the south and southwest.

President Whitehouse, of the St. Louis and Cairo Railway, is in the city to-day. In company with Superintendent Chas. Hamilton he will go to Cairo over his road to-night.

The subject of better commercial convenlences in our trade with Mexico, and cotton rates to the East are mentioned incidentally and a promise made of a betterment in these directions.

President Baldwin and Directors Williams, Green, Whitehouse and others, of the Louisville and Nashville Railway, are in the city to-day, and will go out over the St. Louis division to Louisville to-night.

A new tariff has been issued by the National Dispatch Fast Freight Line and the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada. It contains several new points and rates. Some of the important points quoted in this schedule, are Boston, Worcester, Salem, Nashua and all principal points in New England and the Canadas. I. V. W. Dutcher, Jr., will begin to-morrow to distribute these tariffs.

The Cairo Short Line took forty-three coach loads or 4,000 people to Belleville yesterday, and this morning the colored people of the Chambers Street Baptist Church filled fifteen more coaches and went to the Belleville Fair Grounds to picnic the day out.

Commissioner Fink has notified the members of the pool in this city that the Evansville and Terre Haute Railroad, on which a ten-days' embargo was placed some time ago, has been restored to pool fellowship and that the interchange of business with that road may now be resumed.

An acknowledgement of the ready courtesy with which the requests of the bureau have been met by the railroad managements generally, is proudly referred to. The bureau, a purely St. Louis institution, is an assured success, in fact an indispensable necessity already, and while the friendly co-operation of the railroads has been necessary in the accomplishment of so much inso short a time, yet to Mr. Seth Frink, the bureau's manager, and to Mr. John T. McEnnis, his assistant, a full share of the credit is due.

The following figures showing the size and time of the four Wabash freight trains that took Barnum's show to Chicago Saturday night place the Wabash away ahead again in the matter of fast time. The first section, composed of twelve cars, left the Bridge Junction at 2:10 a. m. Sunday, and reach, Chicago, 283 miles, distant in thirteen hours and forty minutes. The second section, thirteen cars, made the run in fourteen hours and forty minutes; third section, fourteen cars, was on the road fifteen hours and twenty-two minutes and the fourth section, fifteen cars, reached Chicago in sixteen hours and nineteen minutes after leaving East St. Louis. Jumbo and Col. Goshen, the giant, were stowed away in the last car of the fourth section.

The imports at New Orleans from Liverpool in May, 1883, by the Harrison Line direct steamships Discourse and Counsellor were as follows:

Ale and beer	pkgs.	1,145
Iron and steel	"	3,576
Soda, ash and caustic soda	"	845
Earthenware	"	1,175
Wines and liquors	"	1,075
Merchandise	"	1,151
Tin plate	bxs.	5,167
Cotton ties	bdls.	16,500
Iron and steel rails		5,516
Tiles and brick		23,440

The exports from New Orleans via Harrison Line steamships Statesman, Commander, Inventor Architect and Legislator in May, 1883, were as follows:

Cotton	bales	14,869
Corn	bushels	203,111
Oil cake and meal	sacks	12,550
Flour	"	1,747

And assorted merchandise to fill cargoes.

The office of Mr. France Chandler, general traveling agent of the consolidated systems will be the scene this afternoon of two called meetings, the deliberations of which may be of no little importance to Western railroad interests. The first meeting called for two o'clock was the Eastern lines doing business into St. Louis, and the object of the call is to discuss the differential rate question as developed by the through New York car services put on over the O. & M. One of the conditions imposed on the differential lines by the pool is that these differential rates must not be advertised. This, the competing differential lines claim, the O. & M. has been violating, and a trial of the impudent offenders will be the order of this afternoon's caucus. The other meeting is one of the Western lines at three o'clock to consider the subject of the payment of commissions on Western business. Although it was thought that the matter was settled up at the meeting of general passenger agents some time ago, yet the trouble has broken out afresh and another pow wow is positively necessary to prevent a pronounced season of blood-letting on Western rates.

The report of the Executive Committee of the Freight Bureau, under date of June 1, is just out of the printer's hands and will be sent to the members of the bureau to-day. It is a plain statement of what the bureau has accomplished for the commercial interests of St. Louis during the very short time since its establishment, and although each item in its turn has been noticed in these columns from time to time, they will bear repetition because of their importance and are as follows:

1. The rates in effect on the 'Frisco road up to January 1, were such as to have a marked tendency in diverting the trade of Southwest Missouri and Southeast Kansas to other markets. This has to a great degree been remedied.

2. The granting of Chicago rates to all points in the North and Northwest, secured by the hearty and active coöperation of the C., B. & Q. Ry. In this connection the report says as follows of the C., B. & Q. representative in this city: "The Executive Committee gladly seizes this opportunity to return their thanks to Mr. W. D. Sanborn, D. F. & P. Agt. of the C. B. & Q., for his successful exertions in behalf of the commerce of St. Louis."

3. The numerous and important concessions made by the Missouri Pacific and Wabash systems, whereby the trade of St. Louis is opened to all points in the South, Southwest and West reached by these vast systems.

4. The establishment of the Harrison line of steamships between Liverpool and New Orleans.

SPORTING NEWS.

Base Ball Information—The Lacrosse Game—Notes and Gossip.

The Lacrosse match at the Sportsman's Park yesterday afternoon between the St. Louis and Springfield teams drew out a very small crowd. It was the first match game the St. Louis team had ever played at home, and the first regular game ever played in this city. The St. Louis boys acquitted themselves in fine style. The game was called at 3:15 p. m. St. Louis won the first game in less than fifteen minutes, the second in less than a minute, and the third after about six minutes work. A second game was also won by St. Louis. The local team leave for Louisville, Thursday, where they play on the 8th and 9th.

PUGILISTIC.

Prof. William Clark is anxious to match an unknown against any boxer on the list, barring Sullivan, for $1,000 a side.

Harry Williams, the colored champion of the Pacific slope, and Jack McAuliff have been matched to fight for $2,000, at San Francisco, on June 27.

Al. Greenfield says he is champion of England, and is eager to fight Charley Mitchell with or without gloves. Mitchell says Tug Wilson is the best man on the other side, and Greenfield will have to beat him first.

At Albany, N. Y., June 1, James Lynch, a stonecutter on the Capitol, encountered Mitchell, the English champion, at Levantine's Theater, and floored him at the end of rounds, twice out of three rounds. Mitchell knocked Lynch down twice, but it becoming evident that the fight was hot, Captain Davidson, of the Second Precinct, interferred and stopped the performance. It was stated again and again that Mitchell would surely knock Lynch into the orchestra boxes.

Professor William Miller writes from Melbourne, Australia: "I am going to have a glove fight with Lawrence Foley, of Sydney, on May 30, for £500 a side and the heavy weight championship, according to the rules of the London prize ring." Foley is the pugilist whom Jem Mace matched against Abe Hicken, and who beat Hicken. He weighs 150 pounds, and is 5 feet 8½ inches tall. Miller cannot reduce himself below 215 pounds, and is 6 feet ½ inch tall. Nevertheless, the Melbourne sporting men will back their man.

BASE BALL.

The game between the Papins and Salines yesterday resulted: Papin, 9; Saline, 8.

Hutchinson, the Kansas City pitcher, is in Springfield playing with the local team. He has not yet signed with them.

At this time last season the Athletics were first, the St. Louis team second and the Cincinnatis third in the race for the pennant.

Forty business men of Detroit have offered to donate enough to give each man on the home team a $200 watch if the club wins the championship.

The Indianapolis team have won fifteen consecutive games. They play the Athletics, Metropolitans, Eclipse and other professional teams this month.

Dorr, who pitched for the Browns during the latter part of last season, is doing fine work for the Wilmington, Del., Quicksteps, of the Inter-State Association.

Sweeney, the California pitcher, has been engaged by Harry Wright, of Providence, at $100 per month, to take the place of Smith, one of the Providence reserve battery.

Henderson, the new pitcher of the Baltimores, is proving very effective. The team is now said to be very good, with the exception of Geo. Baker, who does not play well as short-stop.

Saturday's League games were: At New York—New York, 22; Chicago, 7. At Providence — Cleveland, 6; Providence, 1. At Philadelphia—Detroit, 5; Philadelphia, 2. At Boston—Boston, 2; Buffalo, 1.

The Association games played Saturday resulted as follows: At Baltimore—St. Louis, 5; Baltimore, 4. At Philadelphia—Columbus, 8; Athletics, 6. At Pittsburg—Allegheny, 10; Cincinnati, 9. At New York—Metropolitans, 6; Eclipse, 7.

The Grand Rapids management offered McLaughlin, of the Toledos, $300 a month to pitch for them. He could not engage, however, as he had only been suspended for thirty days and was refused his release. The suspension was reduced to fifteen days, and he has joined his club.

A good sized crowd witnessed the game yesterday afternoon between the St. Louis Amateurs and the Black Sox, at the Compton Avenue Park. During the first part of the game it looked as if the Amateurs were to have a walk-over, but in the eighth inning the Blacks by good batting and several errors on the part of the Amateurs succeeded in tying the score amid great excitement. In the last part of the ninth inning, however, the Amateurs made a run and won the game by a total of ten runs to nine. The fine work of Gordon, the right-fielder of the Black Sox, was one of the features of the contest. The good batting of Divens, of the Amateurs, was also noticeable.

Levis, of the Peorias, has resigned the captaincy of that team, and the position has been given to McSorley, formerly of the old Red Stockings of this city. Levis' resignation is on account of the recent game with the Springfields in which the Peorias were defeated by a score of 7 to 2. About the eighth inning the Peorias objected to a decision made by the umpire. Levis ordered the men to go back to their positions, but the manager told them to take off their suits and quit which they did. It appears that Levis was in the right, even if the umpire's decision was bad. Manning, of the Springfields, has also resigned his position as captain, which has been accepted by Hengel.

Could Put Up With Anything.

From the Texas Siftings.

Little Sam Wrinkler, on visiting a neighboring family last Saturday, was addressed by the lady of the house:

"What can I do for you, my little man?" she asked.

"I dunno," said Sam. "Mamma told me not to ask for cake or pie, as, did last time, and I'm sorter at a loss to know what to ask for, for I don't know what else ye've got in yer pantry, anyhow; but I can put up with most anything that's handy."

A Sand Freeze-Out.

Considerable interest is taken by the members of the Mechanics' Exchange, in what promises to be a bitter war between the sand companies, and a number of the heavy consumers. There are in existence two companies. While they have not pooled, they have agreed upon a trade price for sand, which at this time is one dollar per load at the boat. Some three or four weeks ago a number of the heaviest consumers of sand in the city associated with capitalists and organized the Consumers' Sand Company. This morning a POST-DISPATCH reporter met John O'Mara, who held in his hand a letter.

"Say, look here," said he, "this is a pretty small piece of business. The old sand companies have undertaken to freeze out the new company before it gets to work. Both of them have notified our firm, Pat Bambrick, F. Gruetzmacher, and other contractors who have taken stock in the new company, that we must pay $2 per load for sand hereafter, just double the price we have been paying. To the trade generally no increase of price has been made."

"What are you going to do about it?"

"We have contracts on hand and must have the sand at any price. We have, however, notified them that we pay the price under protest, and that we will go into the courts for heavy damages."

Disgraceful.

Complaints concerning the street at the corner of Tenth and Olive caused by the caving in of the underlying sewer, are loud, and several families living near the corner have been forced to move because of the horrible stench that rises from the hole. Complaints have been handed in to the proper parties time and again, but the only result so far has been a visit by a city plumber, who, tongs in hand, walked around the hole three times for good luck, and disappeared to return no more. The hole was finally filled up with cinders, no repairs at all having been made to the sewer, and the trouble abated for a time, but it is now worse than ever. A boy, name unknown, while playing about the hole yesterday, fell in and narrowly escaped suffocation. A woman hearing his cries, ran to his assistance and drew him out of the place.

A Texas Cyclone.

DALLAS, TEXAS, June 4.—A cyclone struck Greenville, Hunt county, Saturday night, demolishing the Methodist Church completely, destroying three fine residences and unroofing and otherwise injuring forty or fifty others. Many persons are reported injured, but only one death, that of a small colored child. The damage is estimated at $50,000 to $60,000.

Shut Down.

BLACKSTONE, R. I., June 4.—The strike of the speeder tenders at the Blackstone Cotton Mill this morning caused the shutting down of the machinery and throwing 800 operators out of employment.

Coal Shipments.

PITTSBURG, June 4.—Coal shipments the past forty-eight hours aggregate 1,929,000 bushels, of which 1,377,000 bushels were for Louisville and the balance for Cincinnati.

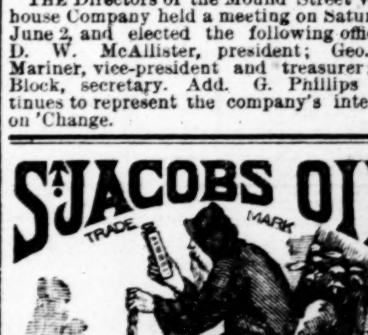

Started Again.

CHICAGO, June 4.—The Calumet Iron and Steel Company, at South Chicago, which has been closed several days, debating whether it would accept the Pittsburg schedule, started again this morning with half the usual force.

THE Directors of the Mound Street Warehouse Company held a meeting on Saturday, June 2, and elected the following officers: D. W. McAllister, president; Geo. W. Mariner, vice-president and treasurer; A. Block, secretary. Add. G. Phillips continues to represent the company's interests on 'Change.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR

restores with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair to a natural, rich brown color, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use light or red hair may be darkened, thin hair thickened, and baldness often, though not always, cured.

It checks falling of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scurf and dandruff, and heals nearly every disease peculiar to the scalp. As a Ladies' Hair Dressing, the VIGOR is unequalled; it contains neither oil nor dye, renders the hair soft, glossy, and silken in appearance, and imparts a delicate, agreeable, and lasting perfume.

J. W. BOWEN, proprietor of the McArthur (Ohio) Enquirer, says: "AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair, and makes it glossy and soft. The VIGOR is also a sure cure for dandruff. Not within my knowledge has the preparation ever failed to give entire satisfaction."

MRS. O. A. PRESCOTT, writing from 18 Elm Street, Charlestown, Mass., April 13, 1882, says: "Two years ago, about two-thirds of my hair came off. It thinned very rapidly, and I was fast growing bald. On using AYER'S HAIR VIGOR the falling stopped, and a new growth commenced, and in about a month my head was completely covered with short hair. It has continued to grow, and is now as good as before it fell. I regularly used one bottle of the VIGOR, but now use it occasionally as a dressing."

We have hundreds of similar testimonials of the efficacy of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It needs but a trial to convince the most skeptical of its value.

PREPARED BY Dr. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists.

A COUNTERPLOT.

Jack Freeder accepted an invitation to shoot at his cousin's place at Norfolk, for the express purpose of "making the running"—to use his own familiar phrase—with Miss Gwendoline Durand, who happened to be staying there on a visit. He had met the young lady once or twice and flattered himself he had created a favorable impression. Though he honestly admired her, the fact was he was chiefly attracted by her fortune, which was considerable. Jack was a light-hearted subaltern in a crack regiment, with a slender allowance, shadowy expectations, and a large crop of debts. The prospect of securing an heiress for a wife was far from disagreeable, especially as Miss Durand was undeniably handsome, while her family and social connections left nothing to be desired.

Considering that Jack Freeder had been petted and spoilt all his life, by men and women alike, it is not unnatural that he should have looked forward with tolerable confidence to securing Miss Durand's hand. He took a fortnight's leave, with the firm conviction that he would return to Mudboro, where his regiment was stationed, an engaged man.

Miss Durand received him pleasantly enough, though she did not appear the least embarrassed or flustered at his unexpected arrival. Jack noted the fact without misgivings, yet with some surprise. He wondered it did not strike her that his deliberately following up their ball-room acquaintance was very significant. He resolved, however, to open her eyes without delay and with that object he commenced to pay her marked attentions. At first the young lady seemed amused, and responded in a similar vein of exaggerated politeness. Probably she thought this was his usual manner; and the mistake was natural, because Jack's ball-room conversation—with which alone Miss Durand had hitherto been regaled—bordered on perpetual flirtation. But after awhile it apparently began to dawn upon her that he was in earnest, and the discovery had the effect of making her strangely reticent and cautious. She studiously avoided those confidential little tête-a-têtes which Jack was constantly maneuvering to bring about, and, in fact, showed in a very marked manner that she anticipated his matrimonial aspirations, and wished him to keep at a distance.

It took Jack some days to realize Miss Durand's attitude. He attributed her sudden reticence to shyness, and, upon the whole, considered it a favorable symptom. But the true state of the case became so obvious that even the blindness of his conceit could not conceal from him that the young lady did not favor his pretensions. He felt more piqued than he cared to own, even to himself; but he was a good fellow at heart, and did not harbor resentment. He bore his disappointment like a man, and revenged himself upon his cousin's pheasants. But, of course, his interest in Miss Durand ceased, and as she seemed anxious to avoid him, he naturally did not force his society upon her. The consequence was that a coldness sprang up between them, and when his leave came to an end, Jack felt no inclination to prolong his visit.

On the morning of his intended departure he was struck by the look of embarrassment upon Miss Durand's face, when they met at breakfast. She returned his salutation nervously, and a pink flush mounted to her cheeks when she happened to encounter his gaze. While he was idly speculating what could be the cause of this sudden emotion, some one at the table referred to him on the subject of the program for the day's amusements.

"I'm sorry I shan't be able to join you," said Jack. "I must return to Mudboro this afternoon."

His cousin and the guests assembled at the table made good-humored protests, but Jack pleaded duty, and was not to be persuaded. Miss Durand said nothing, but he could not help fancying she was ill at ease.

"At all events, stay till after luncheon, and we can try our luck over Bayley's farm this morning," urged his cousin.

"Very well," said Jack, lightly, but still keeping an eye on Miss Durand. "I must positively catch the 4 o'clock train, though, else I shan't get to Mudboro to-night, and there will be a row on if I overstay my leave."

Nothing more was said on the subject, and Miss Durand somewhat abruptly rose and left the table. Jack did not know what to make of her conduct, and could only suppose that his approaching departure was the cause of the young lady's emotion. It seemed hardly credible, but the explanation commended itself to Jack's vanity, and he could think of nothing else all the morning. When the shooting-party returned to the house, he hastened to throw himself in Miss Durand's way. If further observation confirmed his suspicions, there was yet time before he left to turn the circumstance to account.

The young lady appeared, however, to have recovered her composure, and joined freely in the general conversation without showing the least consciousness of Jack's presence. He therefore reluctantly came to the conclusion that the pleasant flutter of excitement which had haunted him all the morning was based upon a delusion. After luncheon he was moving off with the other men towards the smoking-room when he was arrested by the clear tones of Miss Durand.

"What time do you leave here this afternoon, Mr. Freeder?" she inquired.

"By the 4 o'clock train. I suppose I must start from here about a quarter of an hour earlier," he answered, surprised at the question.

"What time is it now?" she inquired.

"Twenty minutes past two," he replied, glancing at his watch. "Can I be of any service to you, Miss Durand?" he added, noticing that she appeared to hesitate.

"I was going to ask—as you will be unable to go with the others—whether you would mind driving Reggie and me into Bilchester?" said Miss Durand, rather hurriedly. "It is his birthday to-morrow, and I promised him a cricket-bat."

"Certainly," returned Jack, considerably taken aback by her asking a favor of him; while the young school-boy alluded to expressed his unqualified approval of the arrangement.

"We can get there and back in an hour, easily," added Miss Durand. "I want particularly to go to-day, or I would not trouble you."

"I shall only be too delighted. I am not sure, though, whether we can do it in the time," he added, suddenly recollecting that Bilchester was four miles off in the opposite direction from the station. "I ought to be back here at half-past three."

"Why need you come back? We can take your portmanteau with us and drive straight to the station from Bilchester," said Miss Durand.

Jack was not in a mood to raise difficulties and at once proceeded to make the necessary arrangements. His man had already packed his portmanteau, and Jack took upon himself to order the dog-cart, instead of the phaeton, in order to be able to travel more quickly. With the same object he dispensed with the services of the groom, directing him to meet them at the station to drive Miss Durand back. He would gladly have found an excuse to leave Master Reggie behind also; but that young gentleman took possession of the back seat the instance the conveyance was driven round, and Jack instinctively felt that if he attempted to dislodge him Miss Durand would interfere.

The young lady speedily made her appearance, looking particularly charming, Jack thought, on account of her flushed cheeks and sparkling eyes. After taking a hurried farewell of the host and hostess, Jack assisted Miss Durand to her seat, and the party started off. His fair companion was animated and lively, and kept up a brisk flow of conversation. Her remarks were generally addressed to Master Reggie; but Jack was too much occupied at first by the vagaries of the fresh little mare in the shafts to notice anything else. When the animal settled down into a steady trot, the young man began to pull himself together and to endeavor to give the conversation a sentimental turn. In this, however, he was not very successful, for Miss Durand refused to take his remarks seriously, and persisted in encouraging Master Reggie to talk. Jack hated that boy on the spot, and felt inclined to snub him unmercifully, though he wisely refrained. But the upshot was that they reached Bilchester before he had had the least opportunity of a confidential chat with Miss Durand, though her manner towards him was more conciliatory and encouraging that it had been since the first day of his arrival.

It was getting on for half-past three when they came in sight of the clock in the market-place at Bilchester, and Jack drew attention to the fact. Miss Durand promised to use the utmost dispatch in executing her commissions, and reassured him by the information that she knew a cross-road which would enable them to reach the station in a quarter of an hour. She would not hear of his accompanying her, but started off under Reggie's escort, saying she would rejoin him in five minutes. It was nearer twenty, however, before she reappeared, and under the circumstances Jack may be excused for having grown somewhat impatient; but the young lady's profuse apologies disarmed his irritation and restored his equanimity. Reggie being absorbed in admiring his new cricket-bat, which he handled with pride, Jack was able to obtain Miss Durand's undivided attention, and proceeded cautiously to lead up to the subject nearest his heart. Miss Durand gave him no direct encouragement, but did not attempt to stop him until he was on the point of making a formal declaration, when she suddenly exclaimed:

"O, Mr. Freeder! I'm so sorry, but I fear that this is the wrong road."

Jack had taken the turning she had indicated on leaving the town, and had contented himself with keeping the mare at a brisk trot without any misgivings about reaching his destination. He now began to look about him, and a finger-post which had apparently informed Miss Durand of her mistake conveyed the unpleasant intimation that he had driven a couple of miles out of his road.

"By Jove!" exclaimed Jack glancing around. "Can't we get on? Is there nothing for it but to turn back?"

"I'm afraid not. This is the Tiverton road," replied Miss Durand, who seemed much concerned.

"Then I can't possibly get to Mudboro to-night—that's quite certain," said Jack, referring to his watch. "A steam engine would hardly get me to the station in time."

However, Jack was of a philosophical temperament, and did not suffer trifling mishaps to annoy him. Besides, he was rather glad to have a little more time at his disposal, now that he seemed to be making progress with his courtship. But he soon found that Miss Durand was not in a mood to continue their conversation. Whether she was tired, or whether she felt embarrassed at the consequence of her mistake, she became silent and dignified, and when Jack endeavored to overcome her reticence, she once more induced Reggie to join in the talk. The consequence was that by the time they reached Marsham Hall Jack's good humor had evaporated, and the interview with his colonel on the morrow was unpleasantly prominent in his mind.

He did not even have the consolation of enjoying Miss Durand's society for the rest of the day, as the young lady went straight to her room on reaching the house, and sent word shortly afterwards that she had a bad headache, and would not appear at dinner. This circumstance did not improve Jack's temper, for he could not help feeling that Miss Durand wished to avoid him. He did not see her again, for she was absent from the breakfast-table the next morning, and he therefore started off in a very disgusted and disappointed frame of mind.

When he reached Mudboro and reported himself to his colonel, he was agreeably surprised at receiving a very slight reprimand, and soon discovered that his brother officers were all in a great state of excitement on account of a dastardly attempt to blow up the officers' quarters the night before. It appeared that a tin canister, containing some explosive substance, had been placed on the window-sill of the mess-room, and from the fuse attached to it being half burnt, it was evident that it had been fired. Chance alone had averted a fearful catastrophe. It flashed across Jack's mind, when he heard the news, that if the explosion had taken place, he would probably have owed his safety to the accident of having missed the train.

Jack was very much impressed by the coincidence, for it really seemed as though Miss Durand had interposed to save him from a threatened danger. But for her he would not have missed his train; and it was very singular that she should have influenced his movements on that particular day. Of course the idea was ridiculous, for how could the young lady have known what was about to take place at the barracks of Mudboro? But Jack was rather superstitious by nature, and it was pleasant to imagine that he was an object of solicitude to Miss Durand. And upon reflection it occurred to him that her demeanor certainly gave color to the suspicion that she had purposely delayed his departure. Her confusion when he announced his intention of leaving, her sudden freak of asking him to drive her to Bilchester when he was on the point of starting, and her strange carelessness in misdirecting him on the way to the station seemed to indicate that he had been the victim of a conspiracy. If this were so, it was evident that Miss Durand had a deeper regard for him than her manner showed, and he felt he had made a vital discovery.

Jack was not the sort of young fellow to throw away his chances, and his natural impulse was to follow up the idea, which seemed like a revelation. He sat down immediately and wrote the young lady an account of what had taken place, expressing in sentimental terms his deep sense of obligation to her, and asking for an explanation of the mystery. His first idea was to return to Norfolk and seek an interview, but he came to the conclusion that it would be more politic to judge of Miss Durand's feelings towards him by her reply to his letter. Jack awaited this with the greatest anxiety and hopefulness, and during the interval it transpired that the affair at the barracks was an imbecile trick of a half-witted trooper who had once been Jack's servant, the contents of the canister being found quite harmless. A day or two afterwards he heard from the young lady, who wrote as follows:

DEAR MR. FREEDER: We were all very much shocked to hear of the wicked attempt described in your letter, and are sincerely glad that it failed. I have a humiliating confession to make to you, which will explain what you wish to know. The morning you were to have left here my maid carelessly handed me a letter addressed to you among my own. I opened it and glanced at a few lines it contained before I discovered the mistake, and I was then so vexed and angry at what I had done that on the impulse of the moment I threw it on the fire. When it was destroyed it occurred to me that it might be of importance to you, and I recalled to mind the contents, of which I had not hitherto taken in the sense. It appeared to be an anonymous letter warning you not to return to the barracks that night, and when you stated at breakfast that you were leaving that day (of which I was not previously aware), I was very much startled and frightened. I could not bring myself to confess the truth, and I therefore adapted an unworthey subterfuge to keep you here another night. Had you started when you originally intended I should never have forgiven myself if anything had happened to you.

I was very miserable and ashamed at the time at my deceit, and have been since. I hoped you would never suspect what I had done; but as you have guessed that I purposely made you miss the train, I think it better to explain the reason. Pray accept my humble apologies and keep mp secret.

In return I will confide to you another secret, which I think, perhaps, you should be told. I am engaged to be married to a clergyman; but as he is at present only a curate, and I am a ward of the Court of Chancery, there are difficulties in the way of our marriage, so that, by the advice of my guardians, the engagement is being kept secret until matters are arranged. After this explanation you will understand that my incivility towards you did not arise from any want of kindly feeling; and I hope, in spite of the deception I practiced upon you about the letter, you will always consider me your sincere friend, Entomology in Jewelry.

From the Boston Journal.

Sad case, that of Tompkins, which was sympathetically whispered about among his friends yesterday and gained the tribute of a sigh from all who heard it. He is a person of somewhat convivial practices and has been out to the West Indies all winter, where, as report goes, he had a time which for once seemed almost too jolly. When he started for home he didn't feel well at all, but he had hopes that the sea voyage would bring him around all right, and in fact when he reached New York he felt a great deal better. On arriving in Boston he met a friend with whom he drank to his happy return and then started out for a stroll. Presently they encountered a young woman who had a hideous cast-iron spider fastened on her cloak, and Tompkins's friend noticed that he shot an uneasy glance at it. Soon after they met a second, who had a frightfully loathsome beetle in the lace at her throat, and presently a third, about whose hat was twined a lizard a foot and a half long. Tompkins's trepidation visibly increased at these unwholesome sights, but he shook it off as well as he could, and had about recovered himself, when he broke out into a scream: "Look at the snake on that woman's ankle who is getting into the horse car! Great Cæsar, I've got 'em again!" and rushed for a doctor. In the ignorance born of his protracted exile he did not know that the prevailing feminine taste is towards reptiles and noxious insects, which they not only wear upon their outer garments, but utilize in the embroideries upon their hosiery.

A Phenomenon.

From the Joplin, Mo., News.

A few minutes after twelve o'clock yesterday during the thunder storm, S. Haggard, who lives in what is known as the Irwin house, on the Paxton land, north of town, was sitting in the east front room of the house looking west, a door leading into the west front room being open, and also a window fronting to the west. Suddenly he noticed a small ball of fire, apparently about the size of an ordinary base-ball, coming towards the house, and before he had time to stir it had entered the house through the open window, and apparently in the center of the room exploded with a deafening report, scattering a shower of sparks in every direction, which, strange to relate, went out at once without setting fire to anything or leaving a trace behind. What is still more strange, neither Mr. Haggard nor any of the other members of the family who were in an adjoining room were injured in the least, merely receiving a slight electric shock, and nothing was damaged about the premises.

A War Incident.

From the Chillicothe, Mo. Crisis.

Lewis A. Chapman, Esq., of this city, hitherto unconscious that he had a sister in the world, has just learned that he has two pretty, healthy, intelligent sisters. During Mr. Chapman's early youth he lived at Utica with his parents, as did his two brothers, G. A. and O. J., one older and the other younger than Lewis. About the commencement of the war Mr. C.'s mother died and his father went to Pike county, leaving the boys with their grandparents, and married there, and afterwards died of cholera in St. Louis, in 1866. Quite recently the older of the girls, who is attending Howard Female College at Fayetteville, Mo., and who had heard of her brothers, inquired of them of Miss Ida Grace, Esq., of this city, who is attending the same college. Through Mr. Grace, Mr. Chapman learned of the existence and whereabouts of his sisters and last week visited his older sister at Fayette.

Strange Disappearance.

From the Palmyra (Mo.) Spectator.

We learn that on Wednesday last, on the farm of Mr. Blair Leggett, the other side of North River, a colt belonging to Leslie Davis, a colored man, was quietly grazing on a hill-side, when the earth suddenly gave way and the colt sank in the opening. A lantern and rope were at once procured, and Davis was let down about thirty feet, when the light was extinguished, and giving a signal to those at those at the top of the opening, he was quickly drawn up. Davis saw nothing of the colt, and says he distinctly heard the sound of rushing water below. We learn that further investigation will be made.

MILLIONAIRE SUICIDES.

How Money Fails to Minister to Minds Diseased.

From the New York World.

That the possession of wealth, even of millions upon millions, does not always suffice to make life happy, or even tolerable, was never more conspicuously shown than in the recent suicide of the Cleveland millionaire, Amasa Stone. His act of self-destruction is by no means the only one of its kind recorded in modern American annals, though it should be said that very rarely has a rich man committed felo de se upon whom there had not been exerted the severe compulsion of complete ruin or supreme disgrace. Notes upon some of the most noteworthy modern cases of suicide by wealthy persons may not be without their interest for the readers of the World.

RALSTON.

On the 26th of August, 1875, the great Bank of California suspended business. For eighteen months William C. Ralston, long its cashier, had been its president. On the following day he went out to a sea-bathing establishment on the North Beach. A boy near by saw the fallen financier, after donning his bathing-suit, sit down upon the shore, tear up some papers and cast the fragments into the sea, then drink off the contents of a phial and plunge into the tumbling surf. After swimming out to a distance of some 200 yards Ralston disappeared behind a vessel. Soon after his body, with scarce a spark of life flickering in it, was seen drifting shorewards, pallid and inert, and though it was soon brought to land and help was summoned, aid was all too late. In the bathing-house were found Ralston's statement to the bank and a few dollars in currency.

Ralston was one of the most brilliant and successful of the Occidental millionaires. Great as was his ability, his ambition was still greater. Quick and bold to plan, as prompt and daring in execution, he has made himself a power on the Pacific Coast and aspired to make that power absolute in politics, finance, mining, railroad management, commerce. He had at Belmont a palace which it cost millions to build and maintain, and the bank allowed him $100,000 a year towards entertaining the scores of guests whom hundreds of blooded horses bore daily out from the city. His pride in the financial institution with which he was so completely identified was the strongest sentiment he had ever known, and when, after a series of unsuccessful speculations—like that in Ophir in which he lost $3,000,000—the fact had to be made public that his financial wisdom was but folly he destroyed himself.

RESTELL.

In February, 1878, Ann Lohman, whom New Yorkers knew better by the name of "Mme. Restell," was arrested in her fashionable mansion on the corner of Fifth avenue and Fifty-second street, every stone of which, it might be said, was cemented with blood. Her stout figure, dark, square features, thick black hair slightly flecked with gray, and small, piercing black eyes had been known to residents of the city for a generation.

Early on the 1st of April, as Mrs. Lohman's chambermaid was descending to the basement, she knocked at the door of her mistress' bedroom, and, receiving no answer, looked in to find the bed empty, but as its occupant's night-gown was lying on the floor she concluded that Mrs. Lohman was in her bath, and so went down stairs. Returning after a little while she was struck by the stillness of the apartment, and glancing into the bath-room was horrified to see the unclothed body of Mme. Restell in the bath, which was filled, it seemed, with blood. With a carving knife which lay by the side of the bath-tub the desperate woman (who had been acting strangely for some days, moaning, lamenting that she would be causelessly persecuted, and insisting that her enemies were resolved upon convicting her), had severed the carotid artery. The parting of the soul had left no trace of agony upon the features, which were peaceful and composed. She left an estate of three-quarters of a million to her grandchildren, Charles R. Purdy and Mrs. Carrie Shannon.

Two years afterwards a report, such as was circulated at the time of Dr. Webster's execution, was set afloat—namely, that a corpse had been substituted for the woman's body and that she was living abroad in luxurious safety, but it was disproved.

GROESBECK.

Col. John Groesbeck was a brother of William S. Groesbeck, the well-known Ohio politician, and upon his father's death had inherited a large estate. He served with distinction in the war, married happily, and with fine health seemed to have all that a man's heart could desire. He was a lawyer by profession, but had turned speculator and was supposed to be doing well in Wall street, when in a flurry in telegraph stocks in 1877 his fortune disappeared—disappeared so completely that he found himself in absolute want.

On the 12th of April, 1878, Col. Groesbeck left the Fifth Avenue Hotel, where he boarded, telling the head-waiter that he was going West. He visited Wall street, where he played a friendly game of cards with a broker's clerk, seemingly in excellent spirits; in the evening he was seen up town; a few days later one of the waiters saw him at Fort Wadsworth, S. I., and noticed that he seemed to be in trouble. Afterwards nothing more was heard of him until the 26th of May, when his body was found floating in the North River. A loaded pistol and a bowie-knife were in the pockets, but there was no wound or mark of violence on the corpse. In one pocket was an empty envelope, the writing on which had been almost washed out by the brine. Nothing else.

LAFLIN.

On the 24th of September, 1878, Addison H. Laflin, ex-Congressman and Naval Officer of the Port of New York, having obtained possession of a rope despite the close watch kept over him by his family, stole noiselessly up stairs to the garret of his house at Pittsfield, Mass., and hanged himself to a rafter, where his still warm body was found by his horrified wife a few moments after his absence had been noticed. He was in his fifty-fourth year, rich and happy in his family relations, but he had for a year been possessed of the hallucination that he was to be overtaken by want, and had passed into a state of brooding melancholy. He had been appointed to the post of naval officer in 1871, when Mr. Conkling's friends secured their crushing victory over the Fentonites, but only held it a few months, making way for Alonzo B. Cornell.

He was not the only New York customs official who had died by his own hands. In the exciting days of Johnson's Administration the President appointed Preston King, a veteran Free-Soil Democrat, whom the late E. D. Morgan had just beaten for the Senatorship, to the Collectorship, in the place of Simon Draper, who had been largely instrumental in King's defeat. This was on the 1st of September, 1865. The excitement of the Administration, and the difficulty of dividing the patronage so as to satisfy all the contending factions proved too much for King's brain, and he went mad, filled his pockets with shot and threw himself from a North river ferry-boat. His body was recovered six months afterwards, on the day that his successor, Henry A. Smythe, was sworn in.

VANDERBILT.

The circumstances of the self-destruction of Cornelius Jeremiah Vanderbilt are too fresh in the memory of New Yorkers to need extended recapitulation. He had for some twenty years been subject to epileptic fits, and when in the winter of 1881-2 he went South, his physical and mental health had been seriously shaken. On the 18th of March he returned to New York, feeling better, and took up his residence at the Glenham. When celebrating his fifty-first birthday at Pinard's he was in good spirits, though complaining of poor health.

He took to his bed on Saturday, April 1, and remained there on the morrow, showing some irritation and wandering. About two o'clock on Sunday afternoon his companion, Mr. Terry, heard the sharp ring of a pistol from Mr. Vanderbilt's room, and, rushing in, found a smoking weapon still clasped in its occupant's hand, and a stream of blood oozing from his head. "My God, what does this mean?" was his frenzied question, but there was no answer. The wounded man, who never spoke, died after lingering three hours.

SADLEER.

Of modern suicides of rich men the mother country, that which made by far the widest and most profound sensation was the suicide of John Sadleer, February 16, 1856. He was a man of marked ability, audacity and unscrupulousness, the leader in Parliament of that "Pope's Brass Band," or "Irish Brigade," which rose to notice by its unmeasured denunciations of the ecclesiastical titles bill, and was declared by Justin McCarthy to be the "most worthless band of agitators who ever pretended to speak with the voice of Ireland." On the date already mentioned John Sadleer's body was found on Hampstead Heath, cold and stiff. He had slain himself with a dose of essential oil of almonds, leaving a letter in which it was declared: "No one has been privy to my crimes—they spring from my own cursed brain alone."

The amount of his defalcations no one ever knew. The deficit of the Tipperary Bank, of which his brother James (who was expelled from Parliament) was manager, was more than $750,000, while a single transaction in a Swedish railway stock amounted to $750,000. Hundreds and thousands of depositors throughout the South of Ireland were ruined, and all the shareholders of the bank. It was long believed that Sadleer had palmed off upon the public the body of a man resembling him closely, and had made his escape with his plunder to America or the Continent, but the story was without foundation in fact.

OTHER INSTANCES.

Among other notable modern suicides of rich men in Britain were those of Samuel Whitbread, July 6, 1815; of Sir Samuel Romilly, November 2, 1818; of the Earl of Munster, illegitimate son of William IV. and that lovely actress, Dora Jordan, who shot himself March 20, 1842; of Lord Congleton, Mr. Parnell's great-uncle, who hanged himself to a bedpost, June 8, 1842; of Lord Cloncurry, who hurled himself from the window of his house at Kildare, April 3, 1869; of Lord Walsingham, Earl Delaware, Dr. Butcher, Bishop of Meath, William G. Prescott, the London banker, etc., etc. Upon the Continent the suicide of Baron Uchetius, the inventor of the steel-bronze cannon used in the Austrian army, in June, 1881, is worth mentioning, both for its cause—the ingratitude of the Emperor—and for its following so close upon the death by his own hand of the American tactician, Upton.

On Christmas Day, 1880, one of the most prominent men in Switzerland, M. Anderwaert, just chosen to the Presidency of the Confederation, killed himself on the public street, and a few days afterwards a rich merchant of Havre, M. Warenhorst, blew out his brains on a railroad train at Rouen for a very tragic reason. He had espoused a widow whose husband was supposed to have been killed during the Commune. A child was born and the happiness of the ménage was complete, when, to the horror of every one, it was found that one of the amnestied Communists, who had returned in the Navarin, was this identical man who was believed to have met with a far different fate, and who now reappeared in this disgraceful character. The shock was too great. M. Warenhorst's brain was unable to bear it, and it was while under the influence of his first impulse of grief and shame that he put an end to his own life.

RUSHMORE, O.—Dr. A. Page says: "I have prescribed Brown's Iron Bitters in several instances, and in each case obtained good results."

Historical Collection of Shoes.

From the Pall Mall Gazette.

A singular addition has just been made to the Cluny Museum. It was the curious passion of the great engraver, Jacquemard, to collect the boots and shoes of all times and countries, and in gratifying this special taste he was at once both connoisseur and artist. He knew the actual value of these curiosities, and he also knew how useful they would be to artists whose subjects were taken from earlier periods in history. When a man has perfected his collection, but two courses are open to him—to break it up or to leave it to the nation. Jules Jacquemard did the latter, and the gallery just opened in the Cluny museum is without rival in its completeness and its interest. The heavy top-boots and leggings of the warriors of the middle ages are here, evidencing that "abundance of grease and absence of Day and Martin" which Carlyle so insisted on as characteristic of Frederick the Great's war custume. Other cases are full of little slippers and high-heeled shoes of the beauties of the eighteenth century. From this collection it would be seen that the ladies' boot, as it was worn a few years ago, buttoned up some inches above the ankle, and, in effect, acting as a kind of bandage round the lower part of the leg, was not very popular, and that, whether from motives of vanity or hygeine, the district around the ankle was allowed the advantage of free circulation. We have latterly reverted to this excellent fashion, but if some collectors were in a hundred years to present our South Kensington museum with a collection of English shoes of the Nineteenth Century, it would be found that heels are still in antagonism to health as they were in the eighteenth.

AMUSEMENTS.

Miss Rose Eytinge, an old St. Louis favorite, begins a week's engagement at the People's Theatre to-night in "Rose Michel." Miss Eytinge is an emotional actress of great ability, and the play which she gives this week affords ample scope for its display. 'Rose Michel" was given at the Grand Opera-House several years ago, and created a very favorable impression. Miss Eytinge will be supported by Mr. Cyril Searle, who comes to St. Louis with an excellent reputation, and by a strong dramatic company. Rose Michel all the week except at the Wednesday and Saturday matinees, when Cazurau's adaptation from the French of "Felicia; or, A Woman's Love," will be given.

UHRIG'S CAVE.

The regular summer season at Uhrig's Cave commences to-night. The Ford Comic Opera Company in "Iolanthe" is the attraction. Ford's company is well known in St. Louis, but the present season promises to be more successful than ever. Miss Letitia Louise Fritsch is the prima donna. Miss Fritsch was heard in the same part at the Grand Opera-house last winter when she was the principal member of the Barton company; Mr. W. H. Seymour, who was so irresistibly funny in the part of the Lord Chancellor in the same company, will repeat the part of Lucusse, and Mr. Phil. Branson, so long and favorably known in this city, will make his debut in opera here in the leading tenor role. Other prominent members of the Ford company are Charles W. Duncan, a California baritone of which much is expected, and Misses Bockel, Reynolds, Eissing, Greer and Butler. A strong chorus has been secured, and the orchestration is by Prof. Sousa, leader of the U. S. Marine band, of Washington, D. C. All indications point to a large audience at the performance to-night and to a successful season throughout the summer.

☞For five cents, Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt., will send colored samples of all colors of Diamond Dyes, with directions.

SLAVERY IN THE SOUDAN.

A System of Captivity and Servitude Which the Victims Seem to Enjoy.

The correspondent of The London News, accompanying Gen. Hicks' expedition to the upper Nile country, writes: At Berber we note for the first time the excess of the pure negro face, either the descendants of former slaves or the actual slaves of the swarthy Arab merchants. These Berberine blacks are to all appearances most happy and contented. Whether they are held in bondage or not, all alike have either laugh or song on their lips. The labor they perform is to a European observer of the most dilatory character, a chant accompanying the slightest physical exertion. So slight is the physical power exhibited that four men will leisurely roll a bale of goods that an English wharfman or porter would make nothing of. They pause at every turn of a package and sing in unison; then over it goes again; in fact they take an hour in doing what an ordinary laborer at home would accomplish in a quarter of the time, and no one seems to hurry them. They apparently have it all their own way, and their way is to take things leisurely. Let it be understood that no apology is offered here for slavery, though from my inquiries among those in forced servitude I did not meet with one who desired to return to his or her native condition of barbarism; and this, I think, speaks volumes in favor of the kind way in which they are generally treated. Though the medium of an interpreter, I had a long conversation with a couple of very neatly-clad Durka men, hailing from the country south of Sennar, lying being between the White and Blue Niles. They had been captured when young in a tribal war—something, for instance, like a feud would be between Yorkshiremen and Northumbrians—and though their captors were of the same race they were mercilessly sold into servitude. To-day they repudiate all notion of returning to their own country. They said: "Here we are well cared for by our master," or, as they termed kind, "kind father." "He clothes us, and when meal time comes we sit under his roof and eat our fill, and at night we have good bedding and shelter. When we desire it he gives us money to go to the bazaar, and what belongs to him belongs to us. We are of his family. Why should we wish to return to the misery and uncertitude of our early life?" Such, as far as I have been able to glean, is the general feeling of those in servitude. They become, so to speak, members of the household of their masters. They benefit largely by the civilization, such as it is, that surrounds them. They form ties and affections, They marry and have children, and they become thoroughly identified with the country and surroundings of those who own them.

At sunset the "tam-tam" or native drum is heard in the court, or at the entrance of every house. Master and servants are alike holding their "tertubas," just as in Spain one hears in provincial towns and villages the twanging of the guitar and the long-signed tremulous note of some Arab fathered music. The female slaves, if really they call be called so, seem to sit as high at their dress-tables as the lighter-colored mistresses whom they serve. Of ornaments they have plenty—silver and gold coins being woven into their innumerable thinly-plaited tresses. Amber, coral and jasper necklaces fall in rows over their, when young, statuesque bosoms, here, as is the custom of the country, left untrammeled by robe or corset. Like the Beshareen Arabs, the Beshareens, male and female, wear attached to their right arm above the elbow red or brown leather cylindrical-shaped amulets, like small drums, containing scraps of parchment inscribed with verses of the Koran or some cabalistic words invented by a local fakir. These are believed to preserve the wearer from all bodily harm. Happily, whatever may be the kindness shown by the master to his bondsman, slavery has its days numbered. The government of the Khedive, rightly influenced, is determined to stamp it out, and the presence of English officers (now in the service of his highness) in the distant provinces of the Soudan will undoubtedly aid the extinction of the curse. Let the mahdi be disposed of, and the revolted districts brought back to to their allegiance, a new moral teaching firmly and sternly inculcated will shed a new light through these dark lands. When the now-turbulent and ever-conflicting tribes are made finally to understand that the sale of their fellow-countrymen is everywhere prohibited, the great incentive to strife will cease to exist; prisoners, hitherto a source of wealth, will become unmarketable, and the excuse for internecine warfare, with a view to mutual kidnaping, become obsolete. Then the numerous tribes bordering the White and Blue Niles will find there is no further profit in war, and with general peace and the development of civilizing influences the plowshare will take the place of the sword. To this end the Government of the Khedive will strenuously and honestly strive, and backed by the energetic work of the English now deputed to attain this end, there is hope for a successful termination of the present revolt. To sum up briefly, the curse of slavery is not the actual holding of slaves, but the misery caused by the destruction of villages, the severing of family ties, and the cruelties perpetrated in the work of capture. People are dragged miles and miles without water, chained by the neck; in fact, the trail of the capturers may be followed by the skeletons of their captives left on the line of route.

"Conqueror of all Life's Woes."

MRS. A. W. HOWLAND, of Providence, R. I., says:

"Deeming it my duty to suffering humanity to inform all who may be afflicted as I have been, of the safe and sure Remedy which, by the blessing of a kind Providence, has restored me to health, with deep gratitude I wish to acknowledge the great benefits that I have received from the use of the most valuable medicine that I have ever seen. During the past three years I have been afflicted with Kidney disease, accompanied by the severe aches, intense pains, weakness and prostration attending this dreadful disease. I tried many kinds of medicines includnig physicians' prescriptions, without obtaining permanent relief.

"A few weeks ago a friend persuaded me to try Hunt's Remedy; and, after using only half a bottle, I was relieved of the severe pains in my back, and continued the use of the remedy until I am well again; and I now can take long walks without being tired, and I have an excellent appetite, sleep well, and am rid of all those aches and pains from which I suffered so long. I most cheerfully recommend Hunt's Remedy as a safe and reliable cure for Kidney disease, and it is the only medicine I have ever found that does exactly what it is advertised to do.

"'Praise the bridge that carries you over safely,' and that to many an ailing one has been Hunt's Remedy, a bridge which has taken them from what seemed fatal sickness to blooming health.

"We are all strong enough to endure the misfortunes of others. But if that misfortune is sickness, it costs nothing to tell them of the great medicine, Hunt's Remedy."

DIVORCE.

Over One Thousand Cases in the St. Louis Courts in Fifteen Months.

The Divorce Laws of Other States—A High Legal Authority Defines the Statute—Marital Infelicity and the Causes for Separation.

A member of the Circuit bench announces that before flitting across the sea for a vacation run through Europe he will one day next week devote himself to the task of severing matrimonial knots which encumber the default docket of his court. The divorce laws of the United States furnish an exhaustive theme and the records of the home circuit illustrate in a startling manner the condition of the social fabric of to-day. Missouri's contribution to the chapter of divorce is merely typical, however, of the operation of a judicial system which is freely criticised by reformers. In Maine it used to be said that it was far easier to get a divorce than to get a drink. It is a matter there of judicial discretion. If the judge thinks that it is conducive to domestic harmony and consistent with the welfare of society, he unties the knot. The same is true of North Carolina. Virginia grants a decree to the man who has been deceived as to the character of his wife before marriage. West Virginia comes to the relief of women who find that they have tied themselves up to men of easy morals. Georgia provides relief for parties who are linked with imbeciles. In Alabama ante-nuptial looseness constitutes a good ground for divorce. Delaware panses before separating persons solely on the ground of infidelity. Nevada gives a decree in every case, where failure to support is shown. New York laws allow decrees in all cases of fraudulent marriage, lunacy or idiocy, incompetency and marriage under a certain age. The laws of Indiana, Utah and Connecticut are commonly credited as being the most elastic for persons who sicken of the matrimonial yoke. In this State no divorce can be obtained on the ground of desertion until the applicant has qualified by a residence of twelve months.

THE ST. LOUIS JUDGES

of late have drawn the lines closely down on all cases of divorce by default, and corroborative testimony is required in respect of every plea set up. The five Circuit Judges during the five terms of the year cut the knot in about 1,000 cases. This average compares favorably with the record of other large cities, and under the present condition of things it cannot be said that many persons are attracted here by the facilities for escaping matrimonial responsibilities.

The main causes for divorce may be summarized thus: Adultery, cruelty, desertion, drunkenness habitual, gross neglect of duty, refusal or failure to support, conviction for crime, absence, desertion and living in adultery, public defamations want of mental capacity, impotence, offering indignities, violent and ungovernable temper, etc.

The highest legal authorities say: "It is the best policy to admit a dissolution of the contract of marriage when it is evident that the parties cannot derive from it the benefits for which it was instituted, and when, instead of being a source of the highest pleasure, it becomes the source of the deepest woe and misery."

If the refusal of divorces would prevent them, all would pray for it. That the wrongs whence comes divorce are evils no and country withholding this redress is one denies. The experience of every state practically, however men theorize, that no form of matrimonial delinquency is less prevalent there than elsewhere. Nor is there any subject other than marriage upon which any man claims that the commission of a wrong can be prevented by the law's denying a proper redress to the injured person. What are the specific causes which should be made by law sufficient for dissolving the marriage it may not be easy to define. Adultery, desertion, cruelty, imprisonment for crime, habitual drunkenness, etc., are destructive of the ends of marriage.

BEYOND THIS LINE

the ground is uncertain and shadowy. There are smothered hatred, love turned to the reverse, jealousies which no reason can allay, an indefinite jarring of natures in collision and other purely mental causes, which render the marriage burdensome. But these are so subtle that human tribunals cannot well deal with them, and the judgment of the later age has been pronounced against allowing parties to divorce themselves at pleasure, since the public and the children have interests in every marriage as well as the parties, and since the restraint is necessary to protect the weaker party. In occasional instances a judge violently opposed to divorces permits his prejudices to overcome his better reason, and he fritters away the statute by an overwrought construction and casts every possible obstruction in the the path of parties seeking this remedy. In one case, a judge dissenting from the majority, refused to concur in a divorce for desertion expressly on the ground that, though authorized by the statute, it was forbidden by the law of God. He said:

"I must elect between a statutory regulation demoralizing in its every influence and tendency encouraging, a system of kin to free-lovism and an express divine law. Judges and lawyers have lavished praise on a legislative policy which has withheld all adequate redress for matrimonial wrongs.

"EVERY STATE

has an interest alike in the private morals, the public happiness, the general virtue and the legitimate increase of the community. A sound policy concurs with private right in demanding the dissolution of marriages which have failed to accomplish substantially the ends for which they were created. By their dissolution the State obtains the benefit of the fruits of such new alliances as the parties may enter into with the advantage of having the children trained under those better influences which harmony and matrimonial concord in the parents produce."

In North Carolina and in Mississippi at an early period the laws sanctioned the exercise of manual discipline upon wives, and other old statutes define the kind of rod to be used in the chastisement of women by their husbands. These are obsolete. Of the divorce history developed in St. Louis of late years it will be found that drunkenness figured as the greater element of misery. The applicants for divorce here belong to every condition of life, and in a large proportion of the cases the parties have borne the yoke for fifteen or twenty years before appealing to the courts for redress.

THE WRESTLERS.

Preparing for the Tournament—Some of the Athletes Backing Out.

Andre Christol, the French wrestler, and Charles Bexermos, said to be one of the best Græco-Roman wrestlers in the country, arrived here this morning. Christol is, for his inches, the best built man in the world, and by long odds the best expert at Græco-Roman in this country. He taught Bauer the art, and Bauer taught Muldoon, so that Christol may be termed the teacher of both. He wrestled with Muldoon here two years ago, but this was merely an exhibition, and gave no proof of the Frenchman's real power. Christol was with the Muldoon-Whistler Athletic Combination, and when they parted he witnessed many amusing brushes between Whistler and Muldoon. Muldoon was challenging the world at Græco-Roman but would not meet Whistler. The latter enraged thereat had a lot of dodgers struck off on which were printed challenges of all sorts to Muldoon. Whenever the latter appeared, Whistler was to be found, and Muldoon never set foot upon the stage, but that dodgers fell about him as thick as snow falls from the clouds upon a stormy day. So troubled and badgered was Muldoon that his friends called upon him to defend himself, and in response to the call the solid man made a match with Whistler for $1000 a side, with Gilmore's garden as the scene of the struggle. Up to this time neither man had taken part in a bona fide match, their meetings having all been of the exhibition order. This struggle will long be remembered. They wrestled for eight full hours without either gaining a fall. Night went and morning came and found them still at it. Those who came to witness the match got tired and went home to their beds and the wrestlers also growing sleepy concluded to let up and a draw was declared. This match goes down on record as one of the few bona fide contests that have ever taken place.

Last winter several wrestling matches took place here, and it was the interest then taken in this class of sport which led to the arranging of the present World's Tournament. Many who heard of the proposed affair predicted a failure, claiming that the wrestlers of the country could not be gotten together to take part in bona fide contests. Notwithstanding these predictions, however, the managers set about securing entries, and soon the promises to be present of such experts as Dinnie, Ross, Christol, Bixermas, Whistler, Cannon, Bibby, Connor, Acton, Jones, Berry, Bauer Durfur and others was secured. Some of these have a record as hippodromers, and especially are Ross and Durfur numbered in this latter list. These two promised faithfully that they would be present. Then at the last moment they wrote on saying: "We will appear at the St. Louis tournament and wrestle for $2,000 a side, providing you give us $500." In other words they were willing to come here, providing they were guaranteed $500. The $2,000 stake was, of course, to be an imaginary one. Bauer also backed out at the last moment, and said he would not come on unless he was guaranteed $300. Acton was also after a guarantee. The managers paid no attention to the requ ests of Ross, Dufur or Bauer, but Acton, being classed as the best man in the world, was appealed to and asked to come here and defend the claim he had set up a year ago to the effect that he was a better man than Whistler. Both the latter and Acton, it will be remembered, then wrestled for two hours in Philadelphia. Whistler assumed the defensive throughout, and evaded all attempts made by Acton to throw him. Whistler's conduct upon this occasion was not admired, but in defense of it he claimed to be out of condition. This match was declared a draw, and since then Acton and Whistler have never faced each other. In their present condition there will certainly be a terrific struggle, for Whistler is now in perfect fettle, and ready to do himself justice. Bibby, Cannon, Connor, Christol, Berry, Brixermos, and the others who are already here, recognizing the fact that there is real work before them, devote all their time to active training. They are at the Missouri Gymnasium every morning exercising with the pulleys, strengthening their shoulders and loins. In the evenings they wrestle with each other at Tom Kelly's. The preliminary bouts will be commenced at 3 p. m. of Friday next. Each contestant will have to take part in six bouts. The opening bout of the tournament will be between Acton and Whistler, who will appear in Græco-Roman. If neither man secures a fall within an hour they will be withdrawn and Cannon and Connor will then appear and wrestle a bout catch-as-catch-can. Bibby and Christol will follow them in Græco-Roman, and Bixermos and Berry will wind up the first afternoon's sport with a bout at catch-as-catch-can. Postlewaite's band has been engaged, and will furnish music during the progress of the tournament.

Delmonico's Advice to a Young Man About to Open a Restaurant.

A young man who had been assistant cook in a Chicago hotel, having saved a little money, concluded he would go to New York and try his fortune. He reasoned with himself that Delmonico would not live always, and fancied that he might one day become the future Delmonico of New York. On reaching the city he sent his letter of introduction to the famous restaurant-keeper and solicited advice. Delmonico listened attentively to the young man's inquiries, and finally told him: "Get, first, a good location; then get the best cook you can hire; see that your waiters are attentive and polite, and buy only the best in the market. And still all of this you can do and not give satisfaction. Be your own superintendent; get the best quality of the new CHARTER OAK COOKING RANGE, and, if you don't succeed in your undertaking, you will have the satisfaction of doing your best to merit it."

William Conner's New Departure.

Mr. William Conner, John McCullough's manager, a gentleman well known in St. Louis, opens his new hotel in New York city this evening under most favorable auspices. It will be remembered that several months ago Mr. Conner purchased the St. James Hotel from Walton, "The Plunger." Since that time the house has been thoroughly refitted in every particular. Improvements have been made so that the St. James now has the advantages of all the modern devices of the most expert hotel architects. The house has been refurnished from top to bottom, no expense being spared to make it first-class in all particulars. Billy Conner has a host of friends throughout the country and particularly in St. Louis. He was born and grew up here, and his numerous friends in this city will be sure to make the St. James their headquarters when they visit Gotham. He has the ability and energy which will no doubt make him successful in his new business. To those who know Mr. Conner, the only recommendation that the new house will need is the sole statement that the St. James is under his management.

Rival Attractions.

The two Jumbos last week in St. Louis constituting rival attractions have been Barnum's huge elephant and the Famous Arctic Fountain, with this difference in favor of the fountain, that it is a permanent St. Louis attraction and can be seen, free of charge, at all times; and when you add to this the fact that it supplies the most delicious sodas and mineral waters on the globe, it seems to us as if the fountain had a mission to fill, which it was successfully accomplishing, in filling up perspiring humanity with something cool and refreshing. We'll just add by way of postscript, that the grand excursion given by Famous on Thursday from Springfield, Ill., to St. Louis and return was a Jumbo affair, and will be soon repeated from Fifth and Morgan.

Fashionable Neckwear.
WHITE AND FANCY VESTS.

There is absolutely nothing which adds so materially to a gentleman's appearance—especially in summer—as a choice and becoming piece of NECKWEAR and a nice-fitting WHITE or FANCY VEST.

Have you bought your summer supply of these really NECESSARY articles? If not, please allow us to direct your attention to our most COMPLETE and truly attractive stock. We never displayed such a large and exquisite variety of both WHITE and FANCY VESTS, or so many TASTY and BEAUTIFUL patterns in Gentlemen's Neck-gear.

An examination will convince the most skeptical that our statements, as usual, are backed up by FACTS in the STORE.

We mustn't confine our remarks to NECKWEAR and Summer Vests, for it's about time, we hope, to put away HEAVY Underwear. We have, of course, EVERYTHING A MAN or BOY wants in that line and in Shirts--cheap and good-fitting ones, too,--Hosiery, etc., etc., as well.

Our FURNISHING GOODS DEPARTMENT is one of the CHIEF attractions of Old "ST. PETERS," and it's quite a rest to be able, once in a while, to write about something else besides Men's and Boys' Clothing.

Our numerous friends and customers who reside at a distance are rapidly learning the great advantages to be gained by sending their orders direct to us. Our artistically illustrated Fashion Book tells the whole story, and whoever sends postal for one gets it FREE of charge.
